

What a beautiful scenic countryside we have this year. The wonderful crop year is so appreciated after last year's drought. Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service Crop Summary reports 97 percent of the state's soil moisture is adequate or in surplus. Small grains and vegetable harvesting is well under way. Lancaster County tobacco farmers are into the annual fall harvest, but the lack of a good market has reduced the number of acres planted.

Silo filling just started this week, but the corn is still very green. Corn statewide was reported at 85 percent tasseled, with conditions variable but mostly a very excellent crop in the making. A very good soybean crop is also expected. Haymaking continued to be behind schedule because of frequent rains. However, the grazers are having a field day this year with good pasture growth that, along with cool temperatures in August, helped milk production. Apples and peaches are also being harvested with a good crop reported. The fields, stream, and farm in the photo captured the eye of the editor on Monday from the corner of Hess and Musser School roads.

Industry Officials Want Producers To Vote On Pork Checkoff

ANDY ANDREWS

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — In-person voting on the pork referendum begins Sept. 19 at your local Farm Service Agency office. The referendum voting ends Sept. 21.

The purpose of the referendum is to allow pork producers and importers to vote on whether to continue the checkoff program administered by the National Pork Board.

The referendum will decide whether to continue the current pork checkoff program.

It's important to vote, according to many industry representatives.

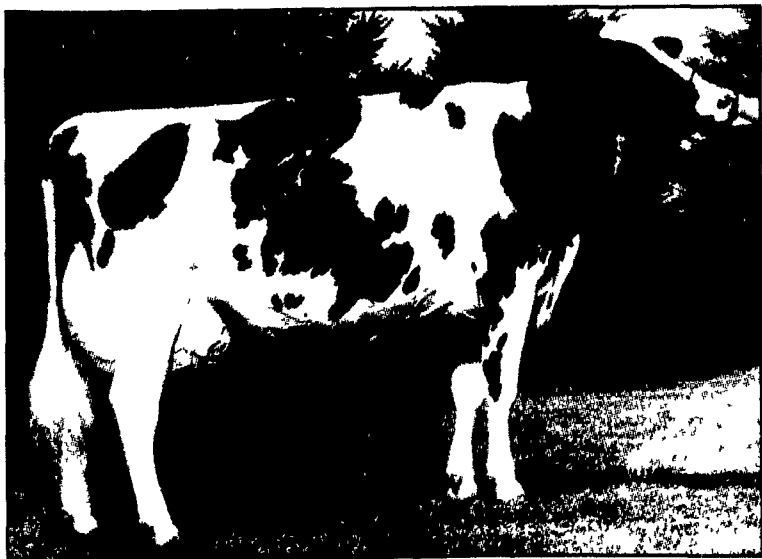

"The most important issue is that pork producers need a voice," said Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist. No organization is as effective as the National Pork Producers Council in helping producers market their swine and provide a "good, objective voice," he said. "They don't base their recommendations or philosophies or comments on emotions and hearsay.

They base it on science and logic."

Promotion of pork is also a

CATTLE: Compared to Thursday, slaughter steers and heifers sold steady to 50 lower. Trading was slow on Monday and early Tuesday, but fancy cattle midway through Tuesday's offering sparked interest and pulled prices close to last Thursday's market. Holstein steers sold mostly steady in a light test.

Slaughter cows were very active and prices trended 1.00-1.50 higher. The slaughter bulls sold fully steady. Supply included 36 percent slaughter steers and 47 percent slaughter cows.

late in the week. The market seems to have good stability at the current level with supply and demand being well matched, both locally and in the major feedlot areas. The current hurdle is the high cost of replacement feeders to eat this year's abundant crop. The price of fat cattle is almost exactly the same as last year at this time, yet feeder steers are selling at least 10.00 cwt higher. Western fat cattle sold steady to 1.00 higher this past week at mostly 66.00 live and 105.00 dressed. Local Holstein steers traded fully steady with much more competition than last week. Slaughter cows closed 1.00-1.50 higher on midweek gains, while slaughter bulls remained active and finished steady. Supply included 40 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 39 percent slaughter cows, 4 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1115-1495 lbs 67.25-70.25, fancy singles up to 73.00. Choice 2-3 1075-1475 lbs 66.00-68.80, high dressing 1-2 up to 70.00; 1510-1640 lbs 62.50-66.75. Select and low Choice 2-3 1090-1500 lbs 63.25-67.50; 1500-1665 lbs

Report Supplied By USDA

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying activity was about fair, however, most dealers were cautious and working to cover most immediate needs. Offerings of bone-in breasts were mostly tight to no more than adequate. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were usually sufficient. Legs and leg quarters were clearing well at most locations, and the balance of items were at least adequate. Movement through retail and distributive channels was moderate. The market tone was fully steady on breast items, steady on the balance.

ATLANTA, GA.

Aug. 23, 2000

Report Supplied By USDA

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally noted as fairly good and enough to keep the bulk of 2.5 and 3 pound sizes in good balance to well cleared. Heavier sizes were at least adequate and clearing satisfactorily. Live supplies were about moderate; weights were desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Some operations were planned for Saturday in preparation for retail promotional activity around Labor Day. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 51 to 68 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady to firm. Bone-in breasts and thighs were generally noted as in best demand.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

Aug. 23, 2000

Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids were slightly lower on lack of fresh export interest and continued harvest pressure. Stronger corn and soybean bids were due to more hot temperatures moving across the Midwest and western Corn Belt areas over the next several days. Wheat steady to 1 cent lower. Corn mostly 4 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum steady. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents higher.

Export sales have slowed this week for all commodities and a report that Brazil will wash out one of its US wheat purchases, weighed on wheat bids.

NEW MOON, AUGUST 29.

KINETOSCOPE PATENTED

Don't know what a kinetoscope is? Thomas Edison received his patent for the incredible device on August 31, 1887. He and his assistant, W. K. L. Dickson, had hoped the device would do "for the eyes what the phonograph does for the ears." The invention was immediately popular for its ability to put pictures into motion—depicting a sneeze, for example. The kinetoscope was soon replaced by a screen projector, enabling more than one viewer at a time to see the pictures. Edison and Dickson continued their explorations of the moving pictures, however, and opened a studio for their short "flickers" in 1893.

We don't know a millionth of 1 percent about anything.

—Thomas Edison

TIP OF THE WEEK

Do not confine your children to your own learning, for they were born in another time.

The Building you want. The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.

Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

Advantages At Home

The retail out-of-store price for a gallon of milk in Chicago area supermarkets is at a record high of $3.69, according to a recent article that appeared in the Wall Street Journal. The same article notes that in supermarkets across the nation the average price of a gallon of milk fell by 6 percent or 18 cents per gallon, while at the same time, the price paid to dairy farmers dropped almost 26 percent or 44 cents per gallon since January 1999.

But this is not true in Pennsylvania, thanks to our system that includes the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board. The average price for a gallon of whole milk sold in Pennsylvania during July 2000 was $2.67. This price includes the mandatory over-order premium paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers of $1.25 per one hundred pounds of milk. This equates to 11 cents per gallon. Since January 1999 the average retail price in Pennsylvania for a gallon of whole milk dropped by 31 cents as compared to the 34 cents per gallon price drop to the dairy farmer.

Pennsylvania, through the efforts of the Milk Marketing Board, establishes the minimum price that a Pennsylvania retail store can charge to its customers. This retail price is based on the price that is paid to the dairy farmer. When there is a change in the price paid to the Pennsylvania dairy farmer, the change is reflected in the minimum retail price the following month. Although the Milk Marketing Board has the authority to establish maximum retail out-of-store prices, it has not found it necessary to do so, since most grocery stores sell at the minimum price.

This ability to adjust the retail price of milk each month based on fluctuating producer prices greatly benefits Pennsylvania consumers. And dairy farmers may want to consider the advantages of producing milk in Pennsylvania before heading off to the Midwest.

Editor:

In many talks about dairy pricing, the argument will be made that another part of the country or the world can produce milk cheaper than we can, so, therefore, if we cannot make milk as cheap as some other part of the country or world, we should quietly throw in the towel and pursue other careers. Those who think that family farms should be preserved are considered naive and out of touch with the times. However, some economists now see that family farms are actually very efficient, perhaps more efficient than huge farms. Those who only look at dollar signs and sterile statistics fail to see the importance and value that family farms have in society. They overlook the human pain, inflicted on people who are clearly taken advantage of by those who have the power and resources to do so. Farming for most is more than just another job or business opportunity. It is a way of life, and, even more, there is a deep heritage involved. Many farms that have been in a family for several generations will not be passed on to the next or are only one major set back from going out of business. Rich heritage and lifetimes of hard work are in jeopardy because of artificially devalued farm milk

To Enjoy Sweet Corn

To insure customer satisfaction and increase consumption of our commodities, it is very important to educate the consumer on how to best handle the food we produce.

The most important element in cooking corn on the cob is freshness, according to Dr. Pete Ferretti, Penn State professor of vegetable crops. Ideally, corn should be cooked soon after you buy it at a local market or pick it in your garden. After picking, corn immediately starts to convert the sugar in its kernels to starch, while also losing its aroma and nutrients.

With fresh corn, microwave cooking gives you the best flavor, aroma, sweetness, and tenderness.

Some tips for microwave cooking are:

- Remove outer husks so only clean, thin, inner husks remain
- Wash single ear in cold water and wrap in a paper towel dipped in cold water
- Microwave each ear for about two to three minutes on high setting. Since many microwave ovens differ in wattage and heating times, try several settings under or over the three-minute mark to suit your taste.
- Using gloves or mitts, remove ears and shuck husks downward to remove husks and silk in one easy motion.

To Cook Sweet Corn Properly

Dr. Pete Ferretti, Penn State professor of vegetable crops, offers the following tips for two additional cooking methods for corn on the cob.

- Boiling. Bring fresh water to a rapid boil. Add three tablespoons of sugar and a teaspoon of skim milk. The milk seems to remove some minerals and enhances the color of the corn. Extra sugar helps the corn better retain its own sugars and discourages leaching into the water. Add husked ears and remove after about 7 minutes of boiling. Never add salt to the water. Salt will toughen the kernels.
- Barbecue. Soak unhusked corn in ice water for about one hour. Place on hot grill. Cover with clean, wet burlap. When outer husks become brown and brittle, check the kernels for doneness. For barbecue preparation, you cannot predict how long to cook corn on the cob because it all depends on how hot the coals are, how far the corn is from the coals, and what type of grill you are using.

To Look At Ethanol

Gas prices higher than you would like to see? Corn prices are lower than corn producers like to see.

Corn and gas do fit together and the high price of one could help the low price of the other.

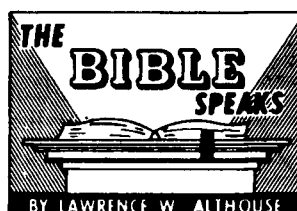

Consumers are being told by the petroleum industry the high prices are a result of new clean air standards set by EPA. According to Lynn Jensen, president of the National Corn Growers Association, this is absolutely wrong. Ethanol is both abundant and affordable. It is a lot more affordable than petroleum. Plus, it cleans up the air without polluting the water.

Ethanol boosts farm prices and stimulates rural economies. It is a renewable fuel source that can help reduce our dependence on petroleum.

When you add it all up, ethanol is not the problem — it is the answer. To find out more about ethanol, go to a new Website developed by the Missouri Corn Growers Association at www.MadAboutGas.com.

For additional information about corn, visit the National Corn Growers Web page at www.ncga.com.

Feather Prof's Footnote:
"Treat your friends like family and your family like friends."

FOR LOVE'S SAKE

Background Scripture:

Philemon 4-21.

Devotional Reading:

James 2:1-13.

Although Paul's Letter to Philemon is just slightly more than a page long and contains "no explicit theological or ethical teaching," my former seminary professor, John Knox, pronounced it "one of the most interesting and illuminating documents in the New Testament, and in some ways one of the most important."

What makes it so important is that in this letter Paul not only speaks of Christian love, but he also applies it to a very specific situation. Being aware of this situation is our key to understanding the letter.

Philemon, a resident of Colossae in Phrygia (part of today's Turkey), under the influence of Paul's preaching, had become a Christian and his home now served as a meeting place for a Christian congregation. Obviously, there was a warm relationship between Paul and Philemon. Paul is presently "a prisoner for Christ Jesus," probably, although not certainly in Rome. It would appear that he was sending Tychicus to Colossae with the letter we know as Colossians, accompanied by another of Paul's associates, a former slave named Onesimus who was to personally deliver the letter to Philemon.

Nothing too exciting about that, is there? But wait — Onesimus was formerly Philemon's slave! He had escaped his master and it would seem he may have stolen something from his as well. Later, Onesimus became a Christian and one of Paul's trusted associates, especially during his imprisonment.

It is difficult for us today to appreciate the seriousness of this situation. In the Roman empire a runaway slave was usually summarily dealt with and it would be quite legal for Philemon to take Onesimus's life.

Taking A Risk?

So, if Paul had found Onesimus so "useful" (a pun: Onesimus's name means "useful"), why would he send the former slave back to his master?

Paul could have kept him with him, but he wanted Philemon and Onesimus to be reconciled, not as master and slave, but as Christian brothers, so that Philemon could willingly send him back to Paul.

There is the potential for a power struggle: Roman law vs. Christian gospel. Legally, Onesimus still belonged to Philemon. As an apostle, Paul could have commanded Philemon to release him.

Paul, however, did not want to settle it that way. "But I preferred to do nothing without your consent in order that your goodness might not be by compulsion but of your own free will." Paul would not compel Philemon, but he would do his utmost to convince him. That is what this letter is all about: Paul attempting to convince Philemon to accept Onesimus as a Christian brother and give up his legal rights as Onesimus's master.

Wasn't Paul taking a tremendous risk, not only of losing Onesimus at a time when he needed him so greatly, but of sending him to his possible re-enslavement or even death? Yes, there was some risk, but Paul did not think he was gambling with the life or freedom of Onesimus because he knew Philemon was more likely to be persuaded by the gospel than by Roman law.

Philemon's Christian love is well known to Paul, and he says "I have derived much joy and comfort from your love." So, he appeals to Philemon "for love's sake" (v. 9).

The love of Jesus Christ is superior to the justice of the law, and it is preferable even to the command of an apostle as well.

Even More

Paul made it very hard for Philemon to turn him down. He stresses his closeness to Onesimus "whose father I have become in my imprisonment."

Out of love for both Onesimus and Philemon, Paul was making a sacrifice: "I am sending him back to you, sending my very heart." He appeals to his personal relationship with Philemon: "So if you consider me your partner, receive him as you would receive me. If he has wronged you at all, or owes you anything, charge that to my account." If Philemon loves Paul, he will "refresh my heart in Christ." And to cap his appeal, Paul says, "... knowing that you will do even more than I say."

Although this is a personal letter addressed to one single person, in a sense Paul is writing to the whole Christian community, including us: "... yet for love's sake I prefer to appeal you."

(Note: In the second century the bishop of Ephesus was named Onesimus. He was likely in Ephesus when a collection of Paul's letters was published there, probably under his oversight. Some scholars believe this Onesimus was the former slave of Philemon.)

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
August 18, 2000

Cow Numbers Continue to Climb

- July milk production up 5%
- July cow numbers continue to climb
- American cheese stocks up 10%
- USDA announces changes in support program

USDA released the July milk production report for 20 major dairy states this week. Most analysts I spoke with were amazed at the gravity of this report. July milk production for these states was 12.2 billion pounds, up 5.0 percent. Production per cow in 20 major states averaged 1,557 pounds for July, 59 pounds above July 1999.

And, the most surprising fact, the number of cows on farms was 7.83 million head. Cow numbers in July were up a full one percent relative to December 1999.

Indiana continued to lead the growth rate in milk production, up 21.7 percent relative to a year ago. Cow numbers alone in Indiana were up 15,000 head relative to July 1999. Other states with strong growth rates were Missouri (up 16.3 percent), Idaho (up 14.9 percent), Arizona (up 11.0 percent), California (up 10.8 percent), and New Mexico (up 9.8 percent). In addition, Illinois, Iowa, and Virginia were up around 7 percent. The only state with a negative growth rate was New York (down 1.8 percent), which experienced excessive spring rains and poor forage conditions.

USDA also released the Cold Storage report this week. That report indicated that butter, American and total cheese stocks as of July 31 were each up 10 percent over a year ago. More milk is increasingly turning into more butter and cheese. American cheese stocks usually begin to decline this time of year as milk production declines seasonally and demand begins to eat away at stocks. This year, however, cheese stocks continued to grow from one month to the next.

Both the milk production report and the Cold Storage report had a negative impact on the Class III futures market. CME settlement prices as of August 18 were as follows: August $10.02; September $10.41; October $10.75; November $10.65; and December $10.70. The September/October CME Class

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers 1.00-3.00 lower.

Steer and heifer calves 2.00 lower with light weight calves up to 8.00 lower. Demand moderate for all classes. Receipts slightly larger than expected as hot dry conditions has dried pastures and cattle are running out of grass. Hot weather also played a role in the lighter calf demand this week. Quality plain to average. Weigh-ups average to mostly full. Flesh conditions slightly thin to fleshy. Slaughter cows steady. Slaughter bulls 1.00 higher. Packer demand moderate to good. Demand good for replacement cows and pairs. Total of 400 cows and bulls sold with 45 percent to packers.

Receipts this week 10,475; last week 6,660; last year 9,593.

Supply consisted of 71% yearlings over 600 lbs; 25% calves under 600 lbs; 4% cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 38% of feeder & calf supply.

Seventh Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity At Maryland State Fair

The 2000 Maryland State Fair will be held in Timonium, Maryland, August 25 through September 4, and will be celebrating its 119th year.

Highlighting the dairy cattle division will be the seventh annual Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity.

"Brown Swiss breeders in Maryland and surrounding states are highly motivated and are looking forward with great anticipation to this event as it was very successful when premiered at the 1994 State Fair," said Cindy Warner, Chairperson of the Futurity Committee. "Because there are breeders from Maryland, as well as neighboring states showing Brown Swiss, we have named this event, "The Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity."

The quality and caliber of Swiss exhibited at the Maryland State Fair is one of the best in the United States, and that's why we decided to showcase the Futurity here," said Warner. Participation continues to be strong, and by all indications of entries for future year's looks to be an event that will grow and develop, according to Warner.

The Brown Swiss Show is slated for Sunday, September 3, 2000 beginning at 12:30 in the Cow Palace with Judge Bob Griggs, Seminole, Okla. The Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity will be a show featuring two-year-olds.

This is a project of the Maryland Brown Swiss Association to stimulate interest in breeding and developing outstanding registered Brown Swiss for production and type, regardless of individual herd size. It recognizes the accomplishments of the small and large breeder, and FFA, as well as the 4-H participant.

"For the seventh year, we are very proud to announce there are 18 two-year-olds competing in this Futurity," said Warner. "This is definitely a strong indication of the interest and participation of breeders of Brown Swiss. We look for this event to grow and get better each year."

Three nominations (payments) are required for each animal that competes in the Futurity. The first entry is made as a calf, then the second as a yearling, and final nomination as of June 1 prior to the Maryland State Fair to be entered in the Futurity. The accumulated monies will make-up the purse for any one year and be directed as prize money among the exhibitors.

The Brown Swiss Show will be on Sunday, September 3, beginning at 12:30 p.m. The Futurity class will follow class 11- dry cow five-years and over. Don't miss the judging for the "Best Two-Year-Old" of the 2000 Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Futurity on Sunday afternoon.

FALL IS THE BEST TIME TO RE-SEED PASTURES

Advantages of Fall Seeding

- ✓ High soil temperature allows quicker germination
- ✓ Pasture is out of production in a slow growing period of the year, unlike in the spring where you sacrifice the prime growing period of the year
- ✓ Very few weeds establish in the fall compared to the spring
- ✓ Most weeds that do establish in the fall will be killed immediately in the winter

Let us answer your questions on grazing. We graze dairy cows here, and try out nearly all the varieties we sell with BG 34 Ryegrass being one of our favorites.

Economics

Recent on-farm trials show that the cost involved with fall renovating a pasture with BG 34 PERENNIAL RYEGRASS is between $65-$100 per acre. The extra spring growth of high quality forage made the milk production per acre more than double compared to the non-renovated pasture! At a milk price of $12 cwt, an extra 900 pounds of milk per acre will pay for the expenses. In this particular trial, the costs were recouped after just two grazings in the first spring. All additional extra milk production in the season and years to follow is profit!

Courtneys Show Supreme At Tioga Open Dairy Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent
WHTNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) — Olivia Courtney's EsBern Blackstar Elsie Sis took the highest honors at the Tioga County open dairy shows, conducted here Friday and Saturday, Aug. 11-12.

The 4-year-old grand champion Holstein trumped the other breed champions to take home the supreme champion title. This is the second time in the four years the award has been presented that Courtney's Blackstar topped the list of entries. She previously won the distinction in 1998. EsBern Farms also was named the premier breeder and premier exhibitor of the show.

Joe Vanderfeltz, Rushville, judged the two-day show. On Friday, the Holsteins, Linebacks, and Red and Whites filled the ring.

The reserve grand champion of the Holstein show, EsBern Jed Allie Manni, also hailed from EsBern Farm and the 4-year-old class.

Named the junior champion Holstein was Kahler Farms' fall calf, Portage Rudolph Delite. The reserve junior champion was Duane Andrews' summer yearling, D Andrews Highlight Greta.

In the Red and White show, Vermillion Holsteins exhibited the junior champion, grand champion, and reserve grand champion of the day. Winter calf Vermillion Salic Tara-Red was named the junior champion, junior 2-year-old Vermillion Sly Peaches-Red was named the senior and grand champion, and Vermillion Concord Marilyn-Red, an aged cow, was named the reserve senior and reserve grand champion.

Morgan Blend showed both Lineback champions. Fall calf Blend Farm Minnie Mouse captured junior champion honors and dry senior 2-year-old Blend Farm Elmo was named the senior and grand champion of the day.

The cheese market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained relatively stable this week. Block prices traded between $1.28 and $1.2850 per pound. Barrel prices actually improved this week, rising from $1.06 per pound on Monday, August 14 to $1.09 by Friday, August 18. USDA reported that spot availability of cheese this week remains high. However, schools are opening soon and that will draw milk away from manufacturing uses. Also, milk buyers in the Southeast are importing increasing volumes of milk to fill their growing fluid demand.

Finally some good news. USDA announced this week they are going to adjust the purchase prices for butter and cheese under the dairy price support program. They are doing this to reflect changes in make allowances under federal order reform. As a result, the purchase price of cheese will rise 2.2 cents per pound, and the purchase price of butter will rise 18 cents.

Rotary, Penn State Team Up To Promote International Agriculture

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Rotary International and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences are launching an innovative program to enhance agricultural productivity and alleviate hunger in Central and Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

The program kicked off during the Rotary International Agricultural Summit in conjunction with Penn State's Ag Progress Days exposition, Aug. 15-17.

The summit brought together Rotarians, government officials, and agricultural university representatives from Pennsylvania and the countries of Estonia, Kazakhstan, Lithuania, Russia, and the Ukraine for a series of meetings, tours, and workshops.

"This event will provide a model for collaborations that will enhance agricultural productivity in regions of the world where increased food production is badly needed," said John Rodgers, governor of Rotary District 7350, which hosted the international visitors. "Peace can begin when there is no hunger in the world."

In the months following the summit, Rotary clubs in central Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia will partner with clubs and universities overseas to develop collaborative projects that address agricultural needs in the emerging free-market economies of Europe and Central Asia. As part of its World Community Service Program, Rotary International will provide initial grants of $25,000 for the projects, which may last for up to three years. Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will oversee the scientific and technical aspects of the program.

Robert Neff, president emeritus of Juniata College and visiting professor in Penn State's department of agricultural and extension education, is coordinating Penn State's participation in the project.

"This program is a unique opportunity for community-based service clubs — not government — to help solve global problems," Neff said. "Penn State's agricultural expertise and established connections in the participating countries make this an ideal partnership."

Keynote speakers at the summit were Frank Devlyn, president of Rotary International; Sam Hayes, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture; and Robert Steele, dean of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Following the summit, the international visitors were scheduled to tour agricultural sites of local and national interest.

Flinchbaugh Finishes First At York Lamb Roundup

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — Veteran 4-H livestock exhibitor Jen Flinchbaugh wrapped up her last roundup with a flourish, claiming the champion honors to add to the array of awards she has earned in more than a decade of youth competition.

The 19-year-old York shepherdess topped the annual 4-H roundup over about three dozen entries, taking the champion banner with her heavyweight class winner. Her 126-pound Suffolk crossbred wether opened the lamb portion of the roundup sale, bringing a final bid of $2.30 per pound from Dean L. Keeny Builders, Red Lion. Flinchbaugh is a sophomore at Penn State, majoring in animal science.

Reserve champion lamb of the roundup judging was the mediumweight class champion, a crossbred wether bred and exhibited by Jacob Emenheiser, Winterstown. The win was the first champion title the 13-year-old sheep breeder took with a homebred entry.

Winning bidder for the reserve champion was Peoples Bank, York, represented by ag lender John Eaton, Jr., who made the $2.05-pound final offer on Emenheiser's 111-pound lamb.

Champion lightweight entry, at 94-pounds, was exhibited by Lindsay Jones, East Berlin, and sold for $1.05 per pound to Dave Hudish, Ag Choice Farm Credit.

Megan Heath exhibited the 131-pound reserve champion heavyweight class winner, which sold for $1.30 per pound. Buyer was Dr. Stanton Lebouitz, York.

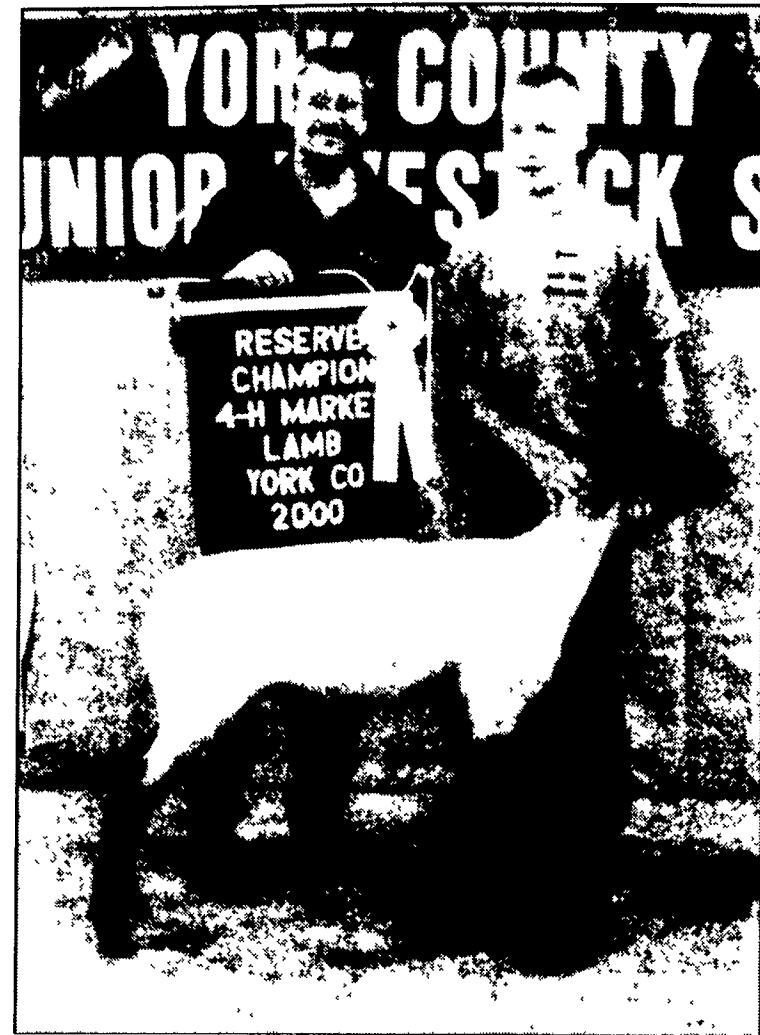

Travis Flory took the reserve champion mediumweight spot with a 106-pound lamb, selling for $1.70 per pound to H.C. Davidson Plumbing, Hanover.

Reserve champion lightweight exhibitor was Nicole Gemmill, with her lamb weighing in at 98-pounds. Buyer was Ray Kopp, York with a $1.25 bid.

The total 37 head marketed through the roundup sale generated a sale average, with the champions, of $1.42 per pound, and generated more than $5,700 in cumulative sale income to the 4-H shepherds. Minus the champion price, the sale average was $1.37 per pound.

Farmers To Descend On Nation's Capitol To Add Their 'Two Cents' Worth

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In an appeal for Congress to make long overdue changes to farm policy, Farmers Union members will be offering their "two cents' worth" in response to the failed Freedom to Farm legislation during the Sept. 10-13 legislative fly-in.

During their visit, family farmers and ranchers will meet with Congressional representatives to deliver their "Two Cents Worth" message along with bags containing commodities produced on America's farms.

"Just as time is running out on this Congress, it is also running out for family farmers and ranchers," said National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson. "Before our representatives in Washington adjourn the legislative session, this citizens lobby intends to not only make them aware of the crises impacting family farmers and ranchers, but also (to) urge immediate action on some solutions to the rural challenge."

Farmers Union has spent the past month reaching out to policymakers with their Two Cents Worth Campaign to draw attention to the core agricultural issues faced today in rural America.

The rural citizens lobby fly-in will continue the call for Congress to pass legislation that will raise loan rates for commodities, increase dairy support prices, prohibit packer ownership of livestock, and promote competitive markets.

In addition, participants will tell lawmakers that Freedom to Farm lacks an adequate safety net to support farmers during sharp downturns in prices. Participants will also push for tools to manage large supplies that have driven down prices, such as a farmer-owned renewable fuel and humanitarian grain reserves and a short-term conservation reserve program.

"Soon, members of Congress will return home to face their constituents in the time-honored, democratic tradition at the ballot box," said Swenson. "This year, they can do so with the knowledge that 'rural votes count' and rural residents are looking for leadership to make rural America more prosperous."

ca more prosperous."

Fly-in activities will also include a briefing with Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman and his top deputies on Monday, Sept. 11.

USDA Wants Drug-Tainted Cows Destroyed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA is preparing to stop packers from selling any meat from carcasses in which excessive chemical residue is found.

Under current rules, packers can throw out the part of an animal that is tested for drug residue, typically the liver or kidney, and sell the rest.

The new policy, which could be made final as early as next month, would require that the entire carcass be destroyed.

Agriculture Department officials said the policy would apply to all livestock, but it would primarily affect slaughtered dairy cows, the source of about 40 percent of the nation's hamburger meat.

USDA officials say the intent is to bring their procedures into line with the Food and Drug Administration's policy on chemical residues in food. FDA sets the limits, or tolerances, for drug residues in food animals.

About 0.2 percent of the cattle tested in 1997 had drug residues in excess of FDA limits, or 12,400 of the 6.2 million cattle slaughtered that year. Animals are tested for more than 50 different compounds.

Cessna Brothers' Holstein Takes Supreme

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) —

C-Cove Storm Sierra Gem, a Holstein owned by Dana Cessna

of Cessna Brothers farm in Clearville, took home the supreme champion award from the Bedford County Fair.

It was a first for the Cessnas and a total surprise. "She is a good, well-balanced animal," said Wayne Cessna, Dana's husband. "But we didn't expect to take home the top."

The Cessnas do not expect to take her to other competitions this year. She will be fresh in December and off her milk cycle.

Taking reserve champion was a 4-year-old Guernsey owned by Aaron Gable of the Snider Homestead Farm in New Enterprise.

The black and white Holstein marked the first of her breed to take the supreme award since 1991, and that was the first year of a Bedford Fair supreme champion. A Red and White did take home the trophy a few years ago.

The winner was selected from a list of dairy champions selected over the previous two days.

Following is a list of show placings.

Trials Yield 100 Bushels

COLUMBUS, Ohio — In the depths of a head scab epidemic four years ago, getting a record wheat yield was far from Ohio farmers' minds.

Yet Ohio State University's 2000 wheat performance test not only set a record yield, it also showed the possibility for 100-bushel-per-acre yields.

"One thing we can draw from such an outstanding season such as this is that there are varieties available to farmers today that have the potential of reaching 100 bushels per acre," said test supervisor Dave Jordan at OSU's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, Wooster.

A 104-bushel-per-acre yield — the test's highest — was recorded at Bucyrus. The average yield of all varieties at all sites was 82.6 bushels per acre, an increase of 3 bushels per acre from last year's record.

The other sites were Hoytville, Wooster, Greenville and Circleville.

Farmers can check out the results in time for selecting varieties for fall seeding at <http://www.ag.ohio-state.edu/~perf>. The test results are also available at local Extension offices.

basic element of the checkoff.

There's no reason, Kephart said, for producers not to get out and vote. "They need to get out and vote, period," he said.

Some believe the checkoff program is essential to continue pork promotional and educational programs. Others see it as an unnecessary expense, noting that large processors and producers already pay for extensive educational and promotional programs.

But many do not question the effectiveness of the checkoff.

"Without the pork checkoff, there would be no coordinated promotion programs," wrote Barbara A. Wiand, president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC), in a letter from the president published in the PPPC newsletter, Pigs Pen. She noted the strengthening of pork industry's position in the world marketplace through the efforts of the checkoff.

Also, without the checkoff, "there would be no coordinated research programs," Wiand wrote. "Checkoff dollars are also invested in research projects that find solutions for producer problems."

Without the checkoff, Wiand wrote, "there would be no coordinated consumer education programs." The checkoff dollars provide consumer education. "Without this component, consumers would not know that pork is 31 percent lower in fat than it was 20 years ago."

Producers control 100 percent of the checkoff funds. Approximately 500 producers, nationwide, serve on boards.

Wiand wrote, "We as producers have the most to lose if the checkoff ends." She urged pork producers to take the time to vote Sept. 19-21.

Those eligible include producers who have sold at least one pig between Aug. 18, 1999 and Aug. 17, 2000, and individuals or entities who have imported hogs, pork, or pork products during the same period. There is no age restriction. Voters must be old enough to complete the ballot. (4-H and FFA members and other youth who have sold hogs in their own name are eligible.)

Corporations, groups, and families selling hogs under one name are entitled to one vote. Producers involved in contract production and who do not per-urban neighbors understand farmers and their fantastic efforts to feed the world with modern farming practices, an Internet site has been developed called Lancaster Farming Cow Cam. Farmers will also get a kick out of this.

In cooperation with Kreider Dairy Farms at Manheim, a sonally own or sell hogs in their name are not eligible to vote.

No documentation is required to vote. Voters will register on site by completing a form to include name, address, telephone number, and a statement that the voter, or the entity he or she represents, was a producer during the representative period (Aug. 18, 1999-Aug. 17, 2000).

An absentee voting package may be requested by telephone, fax, or in person from the county FSA office.

The checkoff rate for the sale of hogs, feeder pigs, and breeding stock is assessed at the rate of .45 percent of the value of sale (45 cents per $100).

For more information about the referendum, contact Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, at (814) 863-3671 or Internet at kkk2@psu.edu or Bob Mikesell, (814) 865-2987, or the Internet at rem9@psu.edu.

Recently, through a supplemental checkoff grant from the National Pork Board, $4.64 million was approved in project funding for retail promotions and advertising and winter, according to Pigs Pen. Pork producers will invest an additional $2.53 million for enhanced promotional efforts through retail merchandising through the end of this year.

Cow Cam: A New Adventure

camera has been placed in their 2-acre comfort barn that takes a picture every several minutes to show the world how cows eat. In addition, future plans call for onsite coverage of field days and other special events that will support our regular extensive coverage of news for farmers.

"Here we have the opportunity to bridge the gap between farm and city without the smells and muck that may be offensive to those who are not accustomed to the farm," said Everett Newswanger, Lancaster Farming's editor. "And we have the vehicle to let farmers take a look at themselves from a new vantage-point."

In addition, editor Newswanger has created a page taken from information supplied by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders that expounds on the economic importance of the dairy farmer in rural communities. Along with "Your Stake in the Nation's White Gold," which is milk, a clickable page from the Lancaster Farming Cow Cam encourages community leaders to make sure their regulatory decisions do not put agriculture out of business with the resulting loss of purchasing activity and tax revenues these dairy farms provide.

At Kreider Farms they already put a lot of effort into this much-needed farm-city relationship with on-farm tours and community service projects such as a kids play yard at their farm dairy store. This joint effort helps to reach the community of both farm and non-farm citizens.

Nestled in the rich farmland of Lancaster County, the Kreider family farming operation has cultivated a network of business enterprises that exemplify the efficient production, which makes the modern American farm the envy of the world.

The Kreider ethic of hard work, quality production, a willingness to take risks, and a fervent faith in God have provided a solid foundation that has built a small farm from a dozen dairy cows and 200 chickens in 1935 to its present diverse farming operation. Kreider farm-fresh products are sold retail and wholesale throughout the northeastern United States. They have four restaurants and a farm dairy store in the general local community.

Lancaster Farming is one of the nation's leading agricultural newspapers with nearly 50,000 copies sent out each week in the major circulation area of Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, and Ohio. First published in November 1955, Lancaster Farming serves as a clearinghouse for news the farmer needs. With an average of 200 pages per issue, nearly 100 market reports are given along with on-farm interviews, a home and family section, an extensive farm calendar, and news of our farm youth.

For those with access to the Internet who want to follow this new adventure and other Lancaster Farming online services go to: www.lancasterfarming.com and click on Cow Cam.

Jersey Takes Top Honors At Kutztown

MICHELLE RANCK

Lancaster Farming Staff

A Jersey took top placing among quality classes at the recent Kutztown fair's colored breed dairy show.

Overall grand champion went to Jill Neiman's 2-year-old "Bayberry." The animal's balance, style, snug udder, dairyness and capacity caught Wood's eye. Neiman owns eight Jerseys on her home farm in Fleetwood. The family milks 30 cows, with approximately half of the herd consisting of Jerseys.

Neiman, who also shows sheep, goats, and beef animals, plans to participate at Kempton, Reading, Oley, and Allentown fairs besides the upcoming district and state shows.

Chris Wood of Littlestown judged the colored breeds show. Wood and her husband Steve own Penn Gate Holsteins and show their cattle at state and national events where they have received several awards.

After participating on the state 4-H judging team Wood attended Virginia Tech and judged on the collegiate level. "I guess I was born and raised with it," Wood said of judging.

"This show was very deep in the quality," said Wood. "The kids did a nice job of handling and presenting their animals."

Most of them were fitted out very nicely," said Wood, who noted that the quality was especially apparent in the Jersey and

Two-year-old homebred "Bayberry" took home grand champion honors for Jill Neiman. In her ninth year of showing, Neiman, daughter of Leon and Linda Neiman, owns eight Jersey cows. Also in the pictures is Grace Hoppes, Hamburg, who gave the painted jar in honor of her husband, Richard Hoppes, who volunteered many years at the fair. “Family Ties” At Elizabethtown Fair

Lancaster Farming Staff

Competition between siblings can take everyone a step higher, a situation which proved to be the case in the beef ring at the recent Elizabethtown fair.

Sarah and Adam put the Zurin family on the board with several wins during the competition.

Sarah's 1110-pound market steer caught judge Tom Livingston's eye and was named champion market steer in the selling division before moving on to become supreme champion of the market steers.

Sarah, 19, will be a sophomore at Grace College in Indiana, where she is studying elementary education. She fit in her fair competition after a trip to Romania, where she worked with orphans and street children.

At this fair, first time was the charm for Sarah. Although she has shown sheep for eight years, Sarah decided to try her hand at showing cattle this season.

"This is a whole new ballgame for me," said Sarah, who "always wanted to show" a steer but stayed in the sheep ring until recently.

Sarah also scored in the showmanship class, where she took home second place in the senior division. She credits her brother Adam, a three-year veteran in the beef ring, with getting her into the beef shows.

"I just wish I had more time," said Sarah, who is showing animals in her last year of 4-H participation.

Adam Zurin, 13, got champion market steer placing the non-selling division. The Zurin family farm in Mount Joy hosts 40 head of cattle plus several 4-

H sheep. Sarah and Adam are the children of Gary and Judy Zurin.

Sisters Caitlin and Courtney Wolfgang not only cornered the market on the Simmental class but Courtney took home supreme champion female in the breeding class and Caitlin won reserve champion female placing.

Courtney's "Miss Teresa" took home first in the junior yearling class before taking the supreme champion spot. Caitlin took "Miss Jalapeno" to second place in the same class. The sisters participate in the Dauphin County 4-H program.

The girls were not limited to competition in the market division, however. Courtney's showmanship talents took her to the top in the junior showmanship class while Caitlin won the peewee showmanship class.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, August 26, 2000-A29

In the showmanship classes, the Hess family took home top honors. Bob and Deb Hess, longtime 4-H leaders, have helped to run the beef show for ten years.

Their children have Hereford breeding cattle, swine, sheep on their home farm in Mount Joy.

The Hess' oldest son John, a recent graduate of Elizabethtown High School, took home not only reserve champion Hereford placing but also a first as supreme champion showman. This fall John plans to head Parents Judy and Gary Zurin, Mount Joy, join children Adam, 13, and Sarah, 19 in the winner's circle at Elizabethtown fair. Sarah took home supreme champion market steer honors. Adam also gathered several awards in the sheep show during the fair.

Chris, Nicole, John, Deb and John Hess, Mount Joy, took home several awards in both the showmanship and market steer classes. Parents Deb and John have run the beef ring for ten years at the Elizabethtown fair.

Caitlin, foreground, and Courtney are joined by their mother and judge Livingston. Courtney took home grand champion female in the breeding class and Caitlin won reserve champion female placing. The girls also topped their showmanship classes.

Beef Ring Action At Kutztown

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

Fair participants had an opportunity to not only present their animals and their talents but also educate themselves in the fit-out divisions at the Kutztown fair.

"This is a competition but is also a learning experience," said judge Jake Hausner, Dover. "It's a way for them (fair show participants) to learn and watch people who are good so they can learn from them."

Kelly Dietrich, 18, Hamburg, took home champion fit-out honors. Dietrich, who has eight years experience in showing as a 4-H'er, is the daughter of James and Donna Dietrich, who produce both crops and beef cattle on their farm. Dietrich plans to attend Penn State Berks

Campus in the fall as an agriculture business major.

Reserve champion placing went to Cathryn Levan, 16, also of Hamburg. Levan will be a junior at Tulpehocken High School this year. Her parents, Paul and Shirley Levan, own cattle on Meadow Hills Farms. Levan, who has participated for eight years in 4-H, also shows sheep and pigs.

Hausner judged the fitting, showmanship, market, breeding, and dairy cattle classes. Hausner, who owns Angus operation JDH Cattle Company with his wife and son, has managed ranches in Virginia, Canada, and Tennessee. He runs a custom fitting business and judges a dozen or more shows a year which include the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, farm show and numerous state fairs.

End the Mandatory Pork Checkoff Tax!

The National Pork Producers Council has collected more than $500,000,000 through the mandatory pork checkoff tax.

What have we gotten for our money?

- 2 out of 3 hog farmers have gone out of business
- Hog farmers' share of the retail dollar has plummeted and our margins have become paper thin
- NPPC supports vertical integration and packer ownership of livestock, and has blocked legislation that will make markets open and fair for independent family farmers

Keep money in your pocket!

End this unfair tax.

clone of Lauduc Broker Mandy, owned by Carrousel Farms, Orangeville, IL, will be offered at the World Classic 2000 sale during the Expo, for delivery in December 2001. Mandy, EX-95 2E, one of the most admired cows in the Holstein breed and a veteran of the World Dairy Expo showing, is the founder animal for the clone. She is a two time All-American and three time All-Canadian winner, with several impressive, high-component records and an outstanding pedigree behind her. She currently has a daughter that was named All-Canadian and both have sons active in A.I. line-ups. Recently named grand champion at the Illinois championship show, Mandy will be back again in the showing at Madison.

With the 1997 birth of Gene, the world's first cloned bovine from a non-embryo-delivered cell, nuclear transfer cloning technology moved closer to becoming a viable means of genetically tailoring herds of livestock, particularly dairy cattle. Not only can these animals be more efficient milk and meat producers, they are considered to be excellent candidates as "walking pharmaceutical factories," whose milk can be utilized for the production of difficult-to-produce pharmaceutical compounds.

'Feisty' Pig Turns Into E-town Champion Hog

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Lynn Brandt watched a feisty pig, since it was born, race to supreme champion Tuesday night here at the Elizabethtown Fair.

A homebred Hampshire/Yorkshire/Duroc gilt, weighing 262 pounds, caught the attention of show judge Dave Holloway, Glen Rock, at the event.

Lynn, 15, daughter of Linette and Dale Brandt, Middletown, said this was her first championship at E-Town. The Lower Dauphin High School sophomore is a member of the Lower Dauphin 4-H Livestock Club.

Lynn said she walks the heavyweight champion, a gilt, which she picked to exhibit at E-Town, around the pen everyday. From the moment it was born, she noted, it was feisty. She also won reserve champion at the Dauphin County 4-H Roundup. She also plans to show at Farm Show.

Reserve was a repeat for Amy Becker, 19, daughter of Marlin and Nancy Becker, Manheim. The 1999 Manheim Central High School graduate is enrolled at the York Technical Institute where she is studying culinary arts and restaurant management.

Amy, who won reserve overall champion last year at the fair, showed a 248-pound light heavyweight champion, a Hampshire crossbred. Amy purchased the gilt from Frank Feeser, Taneytown, Md.

Amy said she exhibited at county roundup and plans to show at Denver, New Holland, and Manheim.

Show judge Dave Holloway said a hog, to be champion, "has to catch the judge's eye." Also, it is a certain "style" the hog must have, including eye appeal.

There were 70 hogs to sell (68 in show) and 30 exhibitors. Following is a list of show placings.

American Salers Junior Association Announces 2000 Board Of Directors

Members of the American Salers Junior Association (ASJA) elected new officers and directors to the national junior board during the 2000 Junior National Salers Show. ASJA is the organization for juniors interested in becoming more involved in the Salers cattle breed.

Newly elected ASJA officers include President Kendra Kipp, Annawan, Ill.; Vice President Katie Boucher-Smith, Baltimore, Ohio; Secretary Amy

White, Lancaster, Wis.; Treasurer Stephanie Smith, Girard, Kan.; and Historian Lisa McRae, Ritzville, Wa. ASJA directors include Mark Zuck-schwerdt, Bloomfield, Ind., and Garrett Werth, Collyer, Kan.

Established in 1983, ASJA is an expanding organization of youth under 21 who join more than 500 other young, visionary Salers members nationwide. Members of ASJA have the opportunity to participate in educational contests, apply for scholarships, and attend the annual junior Salers show.

For more information on becoming a member of ASJA, contact the American Salers Association at (303) 770-9292, or access the junior page on the ASA web site at www.saler-susa.org.

Feb. '99 Heifer Rises To Top At Reading Beef Show

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — A Feb. '99 Polled Hereford won supreme champion heifer recently at the Reading Fair Beef Show.

Emilie Christine Miller exhibited the heifer. Emilie, 15, is the daughter of Mike and Sheila Miller, Womelsdorf.

Emilie, Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Junior Association vice president, obtained the heifer from Maple Springs Farm, near Gettysburg.

The sophomore at Tulpehocken High School said she picked the heifer out when she was about a year old. Emilie said she liked the heifer's "frame and her top, as well as her muscle pattern and depth of rib." She is using the heifer to breed.

Emilie, with her company, ECM Herefords, cares for about 14 cows and three heifers at the family's 150-acre farm. She said she'll have 17 cows calving in 2001.

Emilie picked up reserve champion steer at the Reading Show, a bred-and-owned animal. She exhibited at Reading and Kutztown fairs and at the Tulsa, Okla. Junior National Polled Hereford Show. She also plans to show at Keystone International Livestock Expo and Farm Show.

Emilie, the Berks County 4-H Beef Club reporter, said the Berks County 4-H Senior Livestock Judging Team won the state competition at the recent 4-H Days at Penn State. The team is heading to Louisville.

C.J. Furlong was judge at the Reading Fair Beef Show.

New Easy Beef Products Showcased At Empire Farm Days

WESTMORELAND, N.Y. — From steak to burgers to beef stew, the beef industry continues its emphasis on new, convenient, branded beef products. The New York Beef Industry Council (NYBIC) was on hand at Empire Farm days to discuss the nutritional value and convenience of these products. According to Daryl Heisey, NYBIC Chairman, "Beef is working to meet the demand of today's busy consumers. Many of these products can be heated and served in just minutes — providing consumers with a convenient meal solution, the great taste of beef and a bundle of essential nutrients in every mouthful."

According to NCBA chief executive officer Chuck Schroeder, the entire beef industry is benefiting from the continued need for easy, nutritious beef products. "Companies large and small are answering consumer's call for convenience by launching great-tasting beef products with added value," said Schroeder.

On display in the beef industry tent were products from consumer brands such as Mosey's, Louis Rich Foods and Hormel Foods Corp., all of which have introduced multiple new beef entrees.

The combined efforts of the beef industry and private manufacturers have not only helped the convenient beef category, but also have contributed to the growing demand for beef. Results of the NCBA's "Beef Made Easy" tests showed a first month increase of 7.9 in Eastern super-markets.

In addition to the Beef Industry Tent, information was also available at the Dairy Seminar Tent. Hundreds of recipe brochures were distributed, and children enjoyed wearing "BEEF — It's What's For Dinner" tattoos. A raffle was held for those answering beef nutrition questions.

Crossbreds Dominate York 4-H Market Hog Show

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — Lane Innerst's 4-H project account got a $750 income boost at the annual market swine roundup and sale, Aug. 14 at the 4-H center's livestock exhibit facility.

The 15-year-old Red Lion hog exhibitor snagged champion market swine honors with a lean, stretchy 261-pound crossbred gilt boasting hams suggestive of a bodybuilder's biceps. Innerst's homebred winner was a triple-breed cross, incorporating bloodlines of a Hampshire boar and a Yorkshire Poland China Crossbred sow.

Buyer of the young hog breeder's first roundup champion was Joe Semeister, Windsong Farm Kennels, Red Lion, with an ante of $2.87 per pound for the sale opener.

Second through the sale arena was Heather Miller of Glen Rock, nudging reserve champion "Clancy" to show off her winning qualities to the bleachers packed with buyers and guests on hand to bid and cheer. Longtime youth project supporter Hatfield Quality Meats, represented by buyer Kurt Good, held out for the winning bid of $1.85 per pound for the 241-pound crossbred gilt.

Pairs champion honors went to the well-matched set raised by Cody Ault, whose 225- and 227-pound pigs brought a $2-pound bid from Larry Becker of Stoney Point Construction Company, McSherrystown.

Runner-up pairs honor was won by the 231-pound-each entries of Jessicya Robinson, Delta. Buyer of the pair, at $1 per pound, was Marlyn Flaharty, Service Feed and Supply, Cardiff, Md.

Champion lightweight hog, weighing in at 226 pounds, was exhibited by Jared Miller and sold for $1 per pound to Lee Godfrey for Godfrey Brothers Meats, York.

Randy Wilson took heavy-weight class division reserve honors, with his 270-entry bringing a 95-cent bid from Daniel Laughman, York.

Blaine Rentzel, in the first of numerous additions to bids, added a nickel to the price of Wilson's reserve weight class titlist. Rentzel, on behalf of his Rentzel's Auctioneering Service, then boosted every bid to a minimum $1 per pound for all market swine exhibitor/sellers.

Strine Heating and Cooling, York, was the successful bidder for the 228-pound reserve champion lightweight, exhibited by Jason Seitz.

A total of 75 pigs were exhibited and sold at the annual event, averaging a price, with champions, of $1.19 per pound and $1.15 per pound without the champions.

Rick Jones, East Berlin, was named champion fitter and snagged reserve champion showman honors. Lane Innerst added a champion showmanship ribbon to her day's collection of trophies. Russ Lawrence was named reserve champion fitter.

Boops Exhibit Grand Champion At Northern Tier Holstein Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER

Bradford Co. Correspondent

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming

Co.) — Five-year-old New-Direction Budgee, owned by

Douglas and Jennifer Boop, was crowned the grand champion at

Championship Show.

"We have quite an impressive group of senior aged females," said show judge Curtis Day as he pulled the first and second place 5-year-old cows out of the lineup. He made New Direction

Special Babe-ET, owned by Wayne and Roger Sherwood, reserve grand champion.

Conducted at the Wyoming

County Fairgrounds Aug. 3 and judged by Curtis Day, show entries topped 130 head.

Snowcrest Farm captured both the premier breeder and premier exhibitor banners of the show.

Named the junior champion of the open division was

Norkval Storm Linnell, owned by Gerald and Linda Kisner.

Heather Pease crossed divi-

Peas Charl Eberly-ET, was named the reserve junior champion of the open show and the junior champion of the youth show. Peasedale Astre Dynamite, owned by Nicholas Pease, took reserve junior champion honors in the youth division.

Aged cow Hiltop Manor Victoria, owned by Shelly Woodmansee, earned grand champion distinction in the youth division. She was followed by Braund Valley Parmesan, a junior 3-

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) - While the cow numbers were down at the Elizabethtown Fair Dairy Show on Thursday, the quality was not. And rising to the top as supreme champion of the youth show, was the stylish, black, Wrico Milan Rico shown by Blake Brubaker. The three-year-old was also grand champion of the open and youth Holstein show. Blake also showed the junior champion.

Blake's parents, Lowell and Debra Brubaker showed the reserve grand champion of the open show with Hilltop-Heritage L Tamie-ET, a four-year-old. Justin Wivell had the reserve champion in the youth Holstein show with Donegal Creek Mandel Amy. Nelson Bomgardner showed the reserve junior champion.

In the Jersey show, Andrew Dice had the grand champion with Hollywood Galaxy Elvira, an aged cow and Harold and Audrey Dice had the reserve grand champion with Blue Mountain Trustee Teresa.

Stephanie Donough had the junior champion Jersey, and Jacob Spatz had the reserve junior champion.

Jennifer Zinn had the only Ayrshire in the show and took all honors with Masonic Homes Demand Grace.

In the fitting and showmanship contest, Jennifer Zinn was named supreme champion. She was 1st place in the 13-15 class followed by Timothy Donough and Blake Brubaker. In the 16 & over class, Crystal Brubaker was first followed by Andrew Dice and Justin Wivell. Tiffany Donough was first in the 10 to 12 class. Candice Brubaker was 1st in the 9 & under class followed by Laken Hoffer and Janel Zinn.

Nicole Hess, a sophomore at Elizabethtown, garnered second place in the intermediate showmanship class. Both John and Nicole transferred to Elizabethtown for the agriculture curriculum the school offers.

Chris Hess, an eighth grader at Donegal Middle School, took home first place in the intermediate showmanship class, along with a first in the lightweight market steer class.

Tim Livingston, from Dover, judged the fair's beef classes. He raises registered Angus cattle on his family farm. After judging on 4-H and FFA teams, Livingston participated on the Penn State judging team. He judges four to five shows during fair season.

"There was good competition the whole way through," said Livingston. "There was depth to the classes and excellent showmanship."

Record Year For Crops?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — According to a recent report out of Ohio University, this could be a record crop production year.

The USDA forecasts this fall's U.S. corn production at 10.4 billion bushels, up 10 percent from last year and up 6 percent from 1998. Based on conditions as of Aug. 1, yields are expected to average 141.9 bushels per acre, up 8.1 bushels from last year. If realized, this would be the largest production and highest yield on record since 1866, when corn estimates began.

Soybean production is forecast at a record high 2.99 billion bushels, up 13 percent from 1999 and 9 percent above the previous record of 2.74 billion bushels set in 1998. Yields are expected to average 40.7 bushels per acre, up 4.2 bushels from 1999.

All this while current prices for corn are about $1.50 per bushel, the lowest since 1987. Soybean prices are near $4.65 per bushel — better than last year, but still the second lowest since 1972.

prices. This is an outrage. Family farms provide a work ethic important to society. In today's society many seem to think that only the less intelligent need to do manual work. Many young people today are unwilling and nearly unable to do physical work. This will have serious consequences in the future. Farms also are very important in maintaining agricultural support services. Every farmer realizes the importance of this. I cannot think of an example in history where consolidated agriculture has been efficient in the long term. As the farming population becomes more distant from ownership, they become less productive.

In 1994, the GATT agreement was passed after the elections in a cowardly lame duck session of Congress. Since then unelected, incompetent, and downright treacherous trade negotiations have sold out important segments of our economy, and common sense solutions are smugly sneered at as not being "GATT" legal. Since economist and politicians have said that higher farm gate milk prices will be bad for the "dairy industry" in the long run, they will hurt growth, efficiency and be bad for the consumers. Actually, high farm prices will slow the frenzied pace of consolidation in farming. This is good. Higher prices should result in greater efficiency as a result of being able to update and improve equipment and facilities. Efficiency should result in less work and a better lifestyle instead of a totally stressed out lifestyle. As far as being bad for the consumers, it could be clearly shown that retail prices trend upward regardless of farm prices. Since 1978, retail prices of dairy products have more than doubled while farm milk prices are essentially the same as they were 22 years ago.

It's time that we wake up and realize that family farms are valuable and efficient. The "raw commodity" that we produce does have a real value based on how much it costs to produce it and should be priced accordingly, even if this requires some form of supply management.

"Indeed the wages of the laborers who mowed your fields, which you kept back by fraud, cry out; and the cries of the reapers have reached the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth." James 5:4

So Many Ways To Fold In The Flavor!

Tired of ordinary sandwiches made with plain bread?

Let your imagination roll.

Shake up your morning routine by wrapping your favorite omelet in a tortilla. Keep the party going with Easy Mexican Calzones wrapped in pie crust. Stuff bagels, pitas, and muffins with your favorite sandwich fixings.

In recent years, sandwiches have come a long way from those typically served with ordinary plain bread and hamburger buns. Much of this evolved from ethnic influences of Italian and Mexican restaurants. Taste a calzone, a veggie wrap, or an enchilada, and you want to duplicate it at home.

Speaking of tortillas, did you know that they are more popular in the U.S. than any other ethnic bread — including bagels, pitas, and English muffins?

Tortillas are no longer used only as a Mexican bread. Tortillas are found in a wide range of American fare, from sandwiches and casseroles to desserts and snacks. In fact, as its popularity has grown, the tortilla has found its way into mainstream America, often substituted for bread in peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and for thin, crispy pizzas.

Tortillas come in a variety of sizes to accommodate a wide range of tastes, including fajita size, perfect for kids and Mexican meals; burrito size, perfect for making wraps; and many more.

Try wraps, bagels, muffins, and ethnic breads to accommodate any taste from mild to wild.

At right, Easy Mexican Calzones made with pie crust assuages those looking for something a bit different yet every bit as satisfying as the traditional burger sandwich.

STROMBOLI

1 loaf frozen bread dough, thawed

Flour

6 slices turkey ham

6 slices provolone cheese

6 slices American cheese

6 slices cooked salami

¼ green pepper, diced

2 tablespoons onion, minced

½ cup sliced mushrooms

Pizza or spaghetti sauce

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

On a floured work surface, roll bread dough to 18x6-inch rectangle.

Fill stromboli by laying the turkey ham down the center of dough, overlapping pieces. Next layer the American and provolone cheese, chopped vegetables, and end with cooked salami. Fold meat layers over for easier wrapping.

Carefully stretch dough and fold over meat. Pinch the edges together. Moisten ends, fold over and seal. Placed seal side down on greased baking sheet. Bake 12-15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with heated sauce.

Variation: Try making a steak and cheese stromboli by using fried minute steaks and onions with mozzarella cheese. Serve with sauce.

EASY MEXICAN CALZONES

15-ounce package refrigerated pie crusts, room temperature

1 pound ground beef

4-ounce can diced green chilies

¼ cup water

1.25-ounce taco seasoning mix

1 cup shredded cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese, divided

Garnish suggestions: salsa, shredded lettuce, sour cream, diced tomatoes, sliced green onions

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

Brown beef in large skillet; drain. Add chilies, water, and seasoning mix; mix well.

Place unwrapped pie crusts on cutting board; unfold. Cut each crust in half, making four half circles. Place ½ cup beef filling on half of each circle. Place ¼ cup cheese on top. Dampen edge of crust with water. Fold sides over filling; crimp edges with tines of fork. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake 10-15 minutes or until golden brown. Cool on baking sheet 5 minutes. Garnish as desired.

CHICKEN ENCHILADAS

1 onion, chopped

2 cloves garlic, minced

4-ounces green chilies, chopped

1 pound cooked chicken, shredded

10-ounces enchilada sauce

½ cup jalapeno Jack cheese, shredded

10 corn tortillas, warmed

Saute onion and garlic in a large oiled skillet over medium heat, about 5 minutes. Add chilies, chicken, and enchilada sauce, and cook 2 minutes. Fold in cheese. Remove from heat. Dip each warmed tortilla in water; shake off excess. Fill each tortilla with ½ cup chicken mixture and roll up. Place seam-side down in an oiled baking pan. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Broil 5 minutes and serve hot.

At right, Chicken Enchiladas.

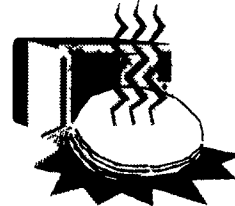

WRAP & ROLL

From breakfast to lunch and snacks to dinner, tortillas are for every meal and cuisine. Here are some quick-fix meal solutions that take less than 10 minutes to prepare.

WRAP IT!

Use your favorite sandwich fillings and make your own wrap or burrito!

HEAT IT!

Heating Instructions:

Tortillas may be heated on a skillet or electric griddle, on the grill or in the microwave. For best results, heat tortillas on an ungreased skillet over medium-high heat for 10 to 15 seconds. Flip and heat for another 5 to 10 seconds.

Microwave: Place 4 to 6 tortillas between two damp paper towels. Microwave 30 to 45 seconds or until heated through. Wrap in a cloth or place in a tortilla keeper until ready to serve.

ROLL IT!

Spread a tasty filling across tortilla and roll for an enchilada or a pinwheel.

FOLD IT!

Fold in the flavor of your favorite soft taco.

BLT WRAP WITH AVOCADO SPREAD

1 ripe avocado, peeled, pitted

¼ cup sour cream

1 tablespoon lime juice

½ teaspoon hot red pepper sauce, to desired taste

½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Dash salt

4 burrito-size flour tortillas

4 large leaves red leaf lettuce

2 large tomatoes, sliced

8 slices bacon, browned

Combine avocado, sour cream, lime juice, hot pepper sauce, Worcestershire sauce, and dash of salt. Blend with a fork until smooth. Spread each warmed tortilla with 3 tablespoons avocado spread. Layer with lettuce, tomatoes, and bacon. Fold in sides and roll up. Serves 4.

Consuming Thoughts

Most consumers are trying to cut food preparation time and reduce food costs. Using a "Master Mix" is one way to save time and money. It takes a lot of time to measure and sift dry ingredients separately for each item you bake.

"Master Mix" streamlines your baking since you do the measuring and sifting for several items at one time. The final mixing, whether it is a cake, biscuit, muffin, quick bread or main dish, is so easy that you can prepare just enough to be eaten fresh. Prepared mixes can save as much as three-fourths of your final preparation time. Using a reduced-fat master mix can save on calories, too.

REDUCED-FAT MASTER MIX

(Yield: 15 cups mix)

- 9 cups flour~
- 1/2 cup baking powder
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 1/2 cups non-fat dry milk powder
- 1/4 cup sugar

- 9 - National Honey Month
- 16 - Cooking With Rice
- 23 - Zucchini, Squash

1/4 cup solid shortening

In a large bowl, sift together dry milk, baking powder, sugar, salt, and flour, mixing thoroughly. Cut the shortening into the dry ingredients until mix is the consistency of corn meal. Place the mix in a covered glass, metal, or plastic container and keep in a cool place. Refrigerate in warm weather. To measure, pile the mix lightly into a cup and level off with a spatula or the back of a knife. Use within two months.

To make reduced-fat Whole Wheat Master Mix, substitute 4 1/2 cups whole-wheat flour for 4 1/2 cups white flour.

PANCAKES

(Yield: About 18 4-inch pancakes)

- 2 cup reduced-fat master mix
- 2 egg whites
- 2 cups water

Put master mix in a bowl, add egg whites and water. Stir about 25 strokes. Batter should not be thoroughly smooth. Bake on hot non-stick pan or griddle sprayed with non-stick cooking spray. (48 calories per pancake; 1 gm fat; trace cholesterol; 116 mg sodium.)

PINWHEELS

(Yield: 12 biscuits)

- 3 cups reduced-fat master mix
- 1/2 cup water
- brown sugar
- jelly or 1 teaspoon cinnamon and fat-free cream cheese

Put master mix into bowl. Add water to mix all at once, stirring about 25 strokes. Knead 15 times on floured surface. Roll out dough into rectangle 1/2" thick. Spread lightly with fat-free cream cheese or jelly. If using fat-free cream cheese, sprinkle brown sugar and cinnamon over the dough. Roll up jelly-roll style and cut into 1" slices. Place side by side on a baking sheet sprayed with non-stick cooking spray. Bake at 400 degrees for 12-15 minutes. (122 calories per serving; 3 gm fat; 1 mg cholesterol; 264 mg sodium.)

MUFFIN

(Yield: 12 muffins)

- 3 cups reduced-fat master mix
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 egg whites
- 1/4 cup water

Put master mix and sugar into bowl; stir well. Mix the egg and water in another small bowl; then add to dry mixture all at once. Stir slightly to moisten about 25 strokes. Mixture will be lumpy. Spray muffin tin with non-stick cooking spray and fill each cup 3/4 full. Bake at 400 degrees for about 15 minutes. (115 calories per muffin; 2.5 gm fat; 1 mg cholesterol; 257 mg sodium.)

DEEP DISH APPLE PIE (MICROWAVE)

(Yield: 6 servings)

- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 5 cups sliced peeled apples
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 cup reduced-fat master mix
- 1/4 cup skim milk
- 2 tablespoons sugar

Mix 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar and 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon; set aside. Combine apples, 1/4 cup sugar, the flour and 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover. Microwave on high until apples are tender and sauce is bubbly, three to four minutes.

Mix master mix, milk and 2 tablespoons sugar just until moistened. Drop by spoonfuls onto hot apple mixture. Sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar mixture. Microwave on high until topping is set, three to five minutes. (171 calories; 1.5 gm fat; less than 1 mg cholesterol; 132 mg sodium.)

SOUTHWESTERN BURGERS

- 2 pounds lean ground beef
- 1.25-ounce taco seasoning mix
- 1/2 cup shredded 4 cheese Mexican blend, divided
- 8 hamburger buns
- 16 ounces salsa

Combine beef and seasoning mix in large bowl. Shape into 8 balls. Make a well in center of each; place 2 tablespoons cheese in each well. Enclose the well and flatten into patties.

Grill or broil for 4-5 minutes on each side or until no longer pink in center. Serve on buns with salsa.

VEGETABLE ROLLS

- 10-ounce roll refrigerated pizza crust
- 2 cups broccoli and cauliflower blend vegetables, thawed, well drained
- 2 tablespoons thinly sliced onion
- 2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
- 3 slices American cheese

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Grease or spray cookie sheet. Press out dough on the cookie sheet to measure 12x8-inch rectangle.

Measure 2 cups broccoli and cauliflower mixture and place down the center of dough. Top with onion and American cheese slices.

Carefully pull dough up and over vegetables, overlapping edges as needed. Pinch dough seams if necessary. Stretch ends and fold over and pinch.

Roll dough over on the sheet. Place on top rack of oven. Bake 12-14 minutes or until golden brown.

One roll serves two as main dish or four servings as a side dish.

Dough alternatives: Double ingredients and use a loaf of thawed frozen bread dough.

Substitute frozen, fresh, or steamed vegetables of your choice.

Club Soda Removes Stains

Apply club soda to remove water-based stains such as red wine or ketchup. Club soda will not remove greasy, oily stains such as mayonnaise, butter, or gravy.

When applying club soda to water-based stains, rinse immediately. Otherwise a residue surrounded by a water ring could result in a permanent stain when dry.

Scorch Removal

To remove a scorch mark made by an iron, rinse with cold water. If it does not disappear, try three percent hydrogen peroxide or chlorine bleach. If scorching has burned the fabric, it has been permanently damaged.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards) Joyce Bupp

Fall has fell.

Pardon that atrocious grammar. But it's true. Fall has fell. Fallen. Whatever.

Sure, it may be a few weeks until the harvest season becomes official. But, for practical purposes, the busy farm routines of summer are doing a fast forward into the frantic "gathering in" pace of the harvest season.

And, blessedly, there appears to be plenty to gather in this "misty, moist" growing season, to steal a phrase from a well-known poem. (Name of both poem and poet elude me at the moment — my apologies.)

Plenty to gather, that is, barring an unseasonal and untimely — and highly likely — very early frost. When August nighttime temperatures are dropping to near 50-degrees, that's a distinct possibility. And if Mom Nature squeezes in enough airy, sunny days — with which she's been stingy this year — in which we can dry alfalfa for hay.

But, back to falling fall. The falling part of which comes a little later. Like falling leaves. And walnuts and acorns falling out of the trees. (And other falling stuff, as the bird soon begin stuffing themselves on ripe, bright-purple, pokeberries, then take rest stops in the tree limbs right over my laundry line.)

This pre-fall time is more accurately measured, not by falling stuff, but by festooned stuff, hanging around like so many party decorations.

We destroy that festooning numerous times a day, as we walk through doorways at the barns and come away festively hung with web residue. That's web as in spider, not world-wide-Internet.

One spider has persistently — and I mean each and every day I wipe it out — spun a delicate silken creation in an upper corner of the door to the weaned calves and yearling heifer housing under the old bank barn. On bright, sunny mornings, it sparkles with bits of dew captured during the hours of dark. The web is so pretty in its geometric pattern that I don't disturb it until it's industrious creator gets carried away with size, at which point we make a clean sweep.

And the spider starts over.

It's probably safe to assume we'll continue this pattern of building and destruction until cold weather sets in. Or the spider gets tired of it and relocates. Perhaps down to the dairy barn, where dozens of its kinfolk have festooned the ceiling edges with dust-catching patterns of silken threads. Sweeping them down is on the "to do" list, somewhere behind canning tomatoes, freezing corn, picking lima beans, mowing the over-enthusiastic lawn, and tending baby calves, which the bovine stork keeps dropping in our pastures nearly every day for the last month.

Festooning the barn several feet lower than the barn-wide-web are pumpkin and gourd vines, thick as The Farmer's thumbs. The vines crawled in one window and out another where the barn wall and pumpkin patch converge. It's necessary to sort of peek through the tangled foliage for glimpses of the orangish fruits, some pretty large, others rather petite. Rooted in old-manure-compost kept rain-forest damp with summer's abundant moisture, the tangle of vines and weeds are so lush it may take jungle machetes to whack our way to the harvest.

One bit of fall festooning is already history. No one even noticed it was there, until I felt a sudden, searing sting on the back of my neck one morning last week, while feeding calves. I snatched a handful of mud from the ground and smeared it on the sting, plotting revenge on the yellow-jacket-wasps covering the flat, round nest tucked up under the low-hanging roof. Early next day, while the stringers were still groggy from the night chill and clinging to the outside of their circular home, I zapped the whole thing with bug spray. After they fell off, the nest was disposed of, too.

Eating breakfast the next morning, I heard a buzzing sound followed by a gentle "plop." On the newspaper in front of my face was a wriggling, stunned yellow-jacket. I squashed it with a piece of paper, tossed it in the trash and glanced at the kitchen ceiling, half expecting to see a "wasp" nest among the spider webs up there.

Apparently the bugs are trying to get even.

Cantaloupes Provide Nutrition, Taste

Pennsylvania producers annually grow about 1,000 acres of cantaloupes, which ranks the Keystone State as eighth in the production of melons.

The fruits Americans call cantaloupes should more correctly be called muskmelons. True cantaloupes originated in Europe and have a rough, warty surface while muskmelons have a netted rind. Muskmelons originated in the Near East and were enjoyed by the ancient Egyptians and Romans. The Romans introduced them to Europe and the Spanish brought them to America.

Although some consumers have their own standards for choosing cantaloupes, there's no disputing some basic ripeness indicators. A good cantaloupe will have no trace of a stem and a pronounced cavity where the melon was pulled from the vine. These two characteristics indicate that melon was harvested when it was fully mature, which is important because melons do not increase their sugar content after they have been harvested.

When buying cantaloupes, select melons that have a thick netting and a rich golden color underneath. They should also have a delicate aroma. A cantaloupe that is still firm can be stored uncut at room temperature to let the flesh become softer and juicier but, as mentioned above, it will not become sweeter.

Cantaloupe can be enjoyed in variety of ways at any time of the day. Sliced, it makes a delicious breakfast feature. Diced or balled, it makes a cool and nutritious addition to lunch or dinner as an appetizer or dessert. Cantaloupe mixed with watermelon, honeydew, blueberries, peaches and other fruits makes an absolutely wonderful summer fruit salad. Generally, cantaloupe should be served at room temperature or only slightly chilled to enjoy the full flavor.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its Food Pyramid, recommends two to four servings a day of fruit. Each one cup serving of cantaloupe contains only 35 calories and is a good source of vitamins A and C plus potassium. The following recipe from the Pennsylvania State Grange Cookbook makes a tasty topping for melon balls.

MELON COOLER SALAD DESSERT

½ cup frozen lemonade or limeade concentrate, thawed
8 ounces cream cheese, softened

4 cups assorted melon balls

Process lemonade concentrate and cream cheese in blender until well blended. Spoon melon balls into serving dishes; top with cream cheese mixture. Serves eight.

Healthy Kids: Eat Safe Food

Harmful microorganisms that get into food and cause disease is called foodborne illness. Some foodborne illnesses have symptoms like an upset stomach, vomiting and diarrhea. Others are more serious and make people very sick. Children are especially at risk from foodborne illnesses because their immune systems are not fully developed. A growing number of children are responsible for preparing their own food at home, thus putting them at risk of contracting a foodborne illness from their own mishandling of food.

Ask your children, "What is a germ?" Remind them that a germ is a tiny life form that we cannot see. Germs are everywhere: in the air and on surfaces. They like things dirty, not clean. By keeping things that touch food clean, we can reduce the chance that germs will get into food. Important ways to keep food safe include these tips:

- Wash hand often. Wash hands before eating, before preparing food, after a sneeze or cough, and always after using the restroom. Wash hands after taking out the garbage, playing outside, or playing with pets. Use warm water and make a soapy lather. Rub hands together while counting to 20. Wash both the top and bottom of each hand, and between the fingers too. Use finger tips to make circles in the palm of the other hand to clean under nails. Rinse hands in clean water and use a clean paper towel to dry your hands. Recent data suggests that proper hand washing and good personal hygiene can significantly reduce the spread of the common cold and flu too.

- Keep things clean. Make sure the table and countertop is clean before food is prepared or eaten. Emphasize that pets, shoes, and other dirty things should not be allowed on the tables or countertops. Use clean plates, glasses and utensils when eating or preparing food.

Explain to children to be sure all meat, poultry and eggs are free of harmful microorganisms, they must be cooked to be a safe temperature. Children should not eat batter or dough that contains raw eggs. When asked to think of ways people can avoid getting sick, remind them to not share drinks with another person, prepare food when sick, or when there is an open wound on the hand. Food tasters should use a clean spoon and then put it with other utensils to be washed, not back into the food. Always avoid "double dipping" when someone eats a part of a chip or vegetable and then dips again.

September is National Food Safety Education Month, and as millions of students head back to school with homemade lunches, a few reminders to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. School lunches can be safely made ahead of time, the night before, and kept cold either in the refrigerator or the freezer. Pack a freezer gel pack as a cold source to keep deli meats, poultry and egg sandwiches cold in an insulated box. Store the carried lunch away from heat sources such as direct sunlight or room radiators.

No leftovers! Just as important as safely preparing and storing a school lunch, is to know when to throw it out. If the sandwich is not finished, don't try to carry it home. The freezer gel won't hold all afternoon, not even in an insulated box.

Hot foods such as soup, chili, or stew, should be kept piping hot in an insulated bottle. Add hot water to the insulated bottle, let it stand for a few minutes, then empty and fill with hot food.

For more information about safe school lunches or food safety, call the extension office in your county, or contact the Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555. You can also find more food safety information on the Web at www.fsis.usda.gov.

DEP, Penn State Cooperative Extension Team Up To Offer Composting Workshops

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary James M. Seif announced that DEP and Penn State Cooperative Extension are teaming up to offer composting workshops and free backyard composting bins to York County residents.

"It is vital for all Pennsylvanians to recycle more of the waste we produce so the commonwealth can meet its goal of recycling 35 percent of all waste generated," Seif said. "This cooperative effort between DEP and Penn State Cooperative Extension is an exciting opportunity for residents to learn about nature's own way of recycling. Plus, composting at home is something everyone can do to help reduce the amount of waste going to a landfill."

Penn State Cooperative Extension of York County is holding workshops on backyard composting this fall. "We must continue to find more efficient and economical ways to recycle our resources if we are to become a truly sustainable society," said Bob Steele, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State University. "We are committed to helping Pennsylvania's citizens meet these goals through our research and extension programs."

Each person who preregisters and attends a workshop taught by a master composter, will receive a free composting bin as long as supplies last. The 45-minute workshop is repeated at 5 p.m., 6 p.m., 7 p.m., and 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 19, at the County Annex Building, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York in meeting room 2. Choose only one time slot to attend. For directions, call (717) 840-7408. To receive a bin, you must preregister by calling Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

"I strongly encourage everyone to attend one of these workshops to learn about composting," Seif said. "Biodegradable waste, such as banana peels, grass clippings, leaves and even coffee grounds, will break down into compost. You can spread compost over gardens, lawns, and flowerbeds to add nutrients to the soil. This is literally recycling in its purest form."

Summertime Smoothies: Easy As 1-2-3

PHILADELPHIA — Smoothies are one of the hottest trends in one-fisted foods. Maybe one reason for their popularity is that smoothies are versatile enough to be a grab-n-go breakfast, a refreshing afternoon snack or a luscious, good-for-you dessert.

Yes, smoothies are America's power drink and they are everywhere — in airports, at health clubs, in restaurants and at the mall.

Maybe the best thing about smoothies, though, is how easily they can be made at home. Take advantage of the season's freshest, ripest fruits. Pull out your blender: At just a whirl away, eating better is an easy as 1-2-3!

1. For consistency and a creamy texture, start with a cup of milk.

Pour the milk directly into your blender to save on clean-up, measuring by the marks on the side of the blender.

You can also add:

- 1 carton of yogurt, any flavor
- ½ cup frozen yogurt, sorbet or sherbet

• milk cubes-freeze milk in ice trays. Milk cubes don't dilute the flavor like ice cubes can.

2. Add fresh or frozen fruit.

Studies show that people who consume more fruit are at less risk of many diseases. Yet, even though fruits are a powerhouse of vitamins, minerals and phytochemicals, most of us fall short of getting the fruit we need daily. Smoothies are a simple solution. And since smoothies use the whole fruit instead of just the juice, they also are a delicious way to boost the fiber in your diet.

Choose your favorite fruits or use your imagination to develop new combinations! Freezing fruit before use will make your smoothie thicker. Simply peel and cut up fruit. Freeze in individual portions in self-sealing freezer bags. Here's some ideas to get you started:

medium orange, seeds removed, half or whole banana, 1 cup melon, 1 mango, 1 cup papaya, 1 peach, ½-1 cup fresh or canned pineapple, 1 kiwi-don't overblend, and 1 cup berries.

3. Add flavors or fiber, if desired. Blend and enjoy!

For flavor try:

- Extracts like vanilla, almond, cherry and lemon
- Zest of lemon, lime or orange
- Peanut butter or ground almonds

• Spices such as cinnamon or nutmeg

• Syrups like chocolate or strawberry

For fiber, add:

- Wheat germ
- Oat bran
- Flaxseeds

These smoothies thicken upon standing so consume immediately ly or adjust the liquid accordingly.

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Lou Ann Good, Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send a self-addressed stamped envelope. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Check your recipe to make sure you copy the right amounts and complete instructions for making the recipe. Sometimes we receive numerous answers to the same request, but cannot print each one.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address. You may also e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

QUESTION — Durwood Tuttle, Knoxville, makes sweet pickles in a crock that he stores in a cellar. About three weeks ago, a gray fuzzy mold formed all over the crock. He washed the crock thoroughly with bleach water but it doesn't keep the mold from forming again. Any help would be appreciated.

QUESTION — Bob Snyder wants recipes for hot rice.

QUESTION — A reader wants to know why there are strings and other sediments that attach to mixer beaters while mashing potatoes. Is it the potato variety used, the speed used to mash the potatoes or some other reason?

QUESTION — Rachel Musser is searching for a spaghetti sauce recipe that tastes similar to Prego pasta sauce (traditional).

QUESTION — Lynda Bell, Lincoln University, requested two recipes about a year ago, which were answered. Unfortunately, Lynda misplaced the recipes. She writes if readers will send them again, she promises not to lose them this time. She wants a recipe for gingerbread with butterscotch sauce from the Dinah Shore cookbook. She also wants a recipe for horseradish jelly.

QUESTION — Sheila Roney is looking for a sweet potato pie recipe that includes the ingredients of French vanilla pudding, sweetened condensed milk, and cinnamon.

QUESTION — Charles Cramer, New Market, Md., would like a copy of the "Lancaster Level Flo Cookbook (Recipes From the Land of the Pennsylvania Dutch)." His family enjoyed a recipe that they believe was originally published in this 1970's cookbook. The potato salad recipe had a delicious salad dressing.

QUESTION — A reader wants a recipe to make elderberry wine from fresh elderberries.

QUESTION — A subscriber from Leesport writes that she has a problem with sponge and chiffon cakes. Although the cakes bake well, she ends up cutting off one-inch from the bottom of the cake because it is a gummy consistency.

QUESTION — Kenneth Hixon, Warfordsburg, would like a recipe for making gherkin pickles.

QUESTION — Don Love writes that ladies are not the only ones who like the "B" section. He used to manage restaurants in Gillette, Wyoming, and enjoys good old American country cooking. He'd like recipes to make homemade marshmallow creme, homemade cottage cheese, and cream cheese or substitute.

QUESTION — Several months ago Michael Brennan, Wilkes Barre, was at an auction in Sullivan County where he ate chicken noodle soup. He writes that it was delicious and looked to be only noodles and chicken. He believes the people at the food stand were from Berks County and were also selling beef vegetable soup. Brennan would like both recipes.

QUESTION — A reader is looking for recipes for hot pepper jam and for sweet pepper jam that tastes similar to that made by Kitchen Kettle.

QUESTION — A Newburg reader would like recipes for jams and jellies or fruit spreads without sugar or artificial sweetener. She'd like recipes that taste similar to brands such as Polar's All Fruit, Spreadable Fruit, or Smucker's Simply 100% Fruit.

QUESTION — Sylvia Allgyer, Christiana, would like a recipe for sourdough seven grain bread.

QUESTION — Eva Mae Oberholtzer, Ephrata, would like recipes to make goat cheeses and soaps.

QUESTION — Like many of our readers, Bonnie Koons, Harrisburg, writes that she loves B section and all the recipes she tries from it are great. She wants a recipe for cheesecake cookies, which have a snickerdoodle recipe base, cheesy center, and a cherry on top.

QUESTION — Shirley Miller, Nazareth, would like to find a recipe or booklet about potato flour.

QUESTION — Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, requests a recipe for canned pickled sausages or ring bologna. If we do not receive an answer to this request within two weeks, we assume our readers do not know the answer and will drop the request.

QUESTION — Ruth Erb, Beavertown, wants a recipe called Ann-Margaret's Favorite Chocolate Cake. If we do not receive an answer to this request within two weeks, we assume our readers do not know the answer and will drop the request.

ANSWER — Thanks to Pat Sickler, Shickshinny, who writes that basmati rice is a delicate and fragrant long-grain rice from India. Use as regular rice to make delicious rice pudding. Basmati can be found in most grocery stores in the section that has gourmet rice, grains, and pastas.

Also Pat writes that she tried unsuccessfully to e-mail this information. She and many other readers are making the mistake of typing in a capital "I (i)" instead of a lowercase "l (L)" in two places for the address that is lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

ANSWER — A Somerset reader wanted a recipe for cooked potato salad dressing that is very yellow from including lots of eggs. The dressing is chilled after it is cooked. Thanks to Jean Sarver, Millerstown, for sending a recipe.

Potato Salad Dressing

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons flour
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup water
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
Mix all of the ingredients together and cook until mixture reaches a full boil.
When cool, add 2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing.

ANSWER — Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, wanted to know where to buy vanilla beans in bulk other than in a health food store. Thanks to Laurie Wagoner who writes that she recommends Penzeys Spices, P.O. Box 933, Muskego, WI 533150. Phone 800-741-7787. She has used this source for years and writes that the spices are superb in quality.

ANSWER — Bonnie Reese, Wellsboro, clipped a wonderful recipe for vegetable pizza from this paper. The recipe had a crust that tasted similar to crescent roll refrigerated dough. She lost the recipe and asked if anyone else clipped it and could send it in to be reprinted. Thanks to Carolyn Landsiedel, Dalton, and Shirley Jane Sipe, York, for sending similar recipes. Shirley writes that a time saver is to purchase fresh veggies from a supermarket salad bar to use instead of chopping your own.

Vegetable Pizza

Crust: Press 1½ packages of crescent rolls into bottom of jelly roll pan. Bake at 350-375 degrees for 10-18 minutes. Cool.

Filling:
8-ounces whipped cream cheese
1 package dry Ranch dressing mix
1 cup mayonnaise
4-ounces cheddar cheese, pressed into filling or omitted

Topping: About ¾ cup each chopped cauliflower and broccoli, ½ red bell pepper, ½ green bell pepper, and ½ carrot shredded.

ANSWER — Here are more zucchini recipes requested by Eleanor Kisner, Muncy. Thanks to Madeline Van Luven, Mantua, N.J., Mrs. King, Paradise, and others for sending recipes. More of these recipes will be printed in upcoming issues.

Zucchini Stuffing Casserole

4 medium zucchini, sliced ½-inch thick
¾ cup shredded carrots
½ cup onions
½ cup sour cream
6 tablespoons butter
2¼ cups herbed stuffing cubes
1 can cream of chicken soup
Cook zucchini in a little boiling water with salt until tender, drain. In a saucepan, cook carrots and onions in 4 tablespoon butter until tender. Remove from heat, stir in 1½ cups of herbed stuffing, soup and sour cream. Gently stir in zucchini. Turn into 1½-quart casserole. Melt remaining butter. Add remaining cubes. Toss gently and sprinkle on top of casserole. Bake in 350 degree oven for 30-40 minutes.

Makes 6-8 servings.

Zucchini Seafood Casserole

4 cups zucchini, diced or sliced
1½ cups Bisquick
1½ cups shredded cheese
1 cup chopped onion
6½-ounce can tuna
¼ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup oil
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
Bake, uncovered, at 400 degrees for 30 minutes.

Zucchini Fritters

½ cup milk
1 egg
1 cup flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
½ of 1-ounce package ranch-style dip mix
2 cups zucchini, sliced
2-inches oil in bottom of skillet
Combine milk, egg, flour, baking powder, and dip mix. Dip slices of zucchini into mixture and fry in skillet until lightly browned.

Zucchini Sausage Torte

2 pounds zucchini
½ pound bulk pork sausage
¼ cup chopped onion
½ cup cracker crumbs
3 eggs, lightly beaten
Pinch each of thyme, rosemary, and garlic powder
Pepper to taste
½ cup grated parmesan cheese
Cook zucchini whole in boiling salted water 15-20 minutes or until tender. Drain, chop coarsely. Cook sausage and onion together until lightly browned. Add zucchini and all other ingredients, reserving 2 tablespoons cheese for topping. Turn into 9-inch pie plate that has been greased. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until firm and brown.

ANSWER — Kenneth Hixon, Warfordsburg, wanted a recipe for stuffing peppers with a cabbage slaw mixture and canning in a pickled vinegar mixture. Thanks to Mrs. King, Paradise, for sending a recipe.

Pickled Stuffed Peppers

Bite-size peppers, stuff with shredded cabbage. Pack into pint jars and add ½ teaspoon salt to each pint jar.

Syrup:

2 quart vinegar
2 quarts water
10 pounds sugar
Cook the syrup until sugar is dissolved. Pour into jars and process 10 minutes in boiling water bath.

Thanks to Brenda Baker, Westfield, for sending a different version of stuffed peppers with cabbage slaw.

Stuffed Peppers With Cabbage Slaw

Hot banana peppers
Sauerkraut
Cut off stem end of peppers and remove seeds. Stuff with sauerkraut and pack into jars. Mix together the following ingredients and bring to a boil:
1½ cups sugar
2 cups water
1 cup vinegar
Pour mixture over peppers and process 10 minutes for pints and 20 minutes for quarts.

ANSWER — A reader wanted recipes using whole grains in bread and dessert recipes. Thanks to a reader who calls herself "Retiring Baker," for writing that she has a cookbook that includes information on adapting any cake recipe that calls for white flour to using a whole grain flour: Add an extra teaspoon of baking powder and an extra egg, substitute white flour with ½ cup nonfat dry milk and whole wheat flour. Follow the recipe as printed. She writes that cake will be more nutritious but won't taste much different from that made with white flour.

Following the above information, the reader adapted a crumb cake recipe that her family enjoys. Recently she is using even more whole wheat flour and cutting back on sugar to 2 cups.

Whole Wheat Crumb Cake

2 cups white flour
2 cups whole wheat flour
2½ cups brown sugar
1 cup shortening (margarine)
3 teaspoons baking powder
Mix all the above ingredients into crumbs. Reserve 1 cup crumbs for topping. Combine the following:
½ cup dry milk powder
3 eggs, beaten
1¼ cups water
1 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in small amount of vinegar. Mix all together. Pour into 9-inch round cake pans with a fitted pieces of wax paper in bottom so cake can easily be removed. Sprinkle crumbs on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Due to the plentiful moisture this summer, there are many kinds of flowers blooming at our house. When I look out the windows, on any side of the house, I see flowers.

The front corner of our yard has a pink and white rose of sharon bush that is covered with blooms. Next comes a few straggly hollyhocks and then some tiger lilies. The rose bed is next followed by a bed of calendulas. In this bed are my saffron bulbs which will only appear in October. But, I keep the ground weeded all year as they are special. Saffron is one of the most expensive spices. My daughter in Atlanta keeps me supplied with the dried, red stigmas.

My garden does not have only vegetables but also an array of flowers. Usually they are assigned a corner of the garden, but this year, when a row of beans did not come up, I put in a long row of pink and red cosmos. As they were planted late, I'm hoping they won't get so tall.

Behind our house is a big hill and here are several flower beds. One has iris, one has day lilies and the other is planted with an assortment of bulbs. This morning the cannas are topped with enormous red blossoms. And next to them are several elephant ear plants.

My husband put stakes around the golden glow flowers as this group is at least seven-feet tall. The purple phlox in front of them are quite striking in appearance.

Along the road are a few red geraniums and one white one in a small grouping around two large stones. I think my flowers are every color of the rainbow.

4-H's Named To Honors Group At State 4-H Fashion Revue

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Fifty-seven regional finalists modeled outfits constructed as part of their 4-H textile science projects, Wednesday, Aug. 2 at the Eisenhower Auditorium on Penn State's University Park Campus.

Stephanie Hale, 16, daughter of David and Lorin Johnson of Saltzburg, received the top score and was selected to participate in the 2000 National 4-H Fashion Revue at the National 4-H Congress in Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 24-28. She made and modeled a gown of pink taffeta that featured a bustle and a gold, organza wrap.

Special honors went to nine other Pennsylvania contestants based on their exceptional construction skill, fit, appropriateness, modeling, and poise.

Dana Schrantz, 18, of Bethlehem, Heather Will, 15, of Somerset, and Sherry Marie Tucker, 18, of Venetia also made and modeled gowns.

Amanda May, 16, of Industry, made and modeled a four-piece classic outfit with pea coat, sailor pants, a navy beret and red fleece scarf with hand-stitched blanket stitch.

Matthew Reichard, 14, of Waynesboro, made and modeled a herringbone wool jacket, cranberry shirt, and corduroy slacks. Aleecha Jones, 16, of Loysburg, made a suit and coat of 100 percent wool. Rachael Risser, 17, of Middleburg, made and modeled a plaid top and skirt with a diagonal yoke. Carolyn Hafer, 18, of Lansdale modeled a cotton damask sun dress and Jennifer Uhrin, 14, made and modeled a powder blue dress and jacket combination.

The 2001 state revue will be July 25 in Eisenhower Auditorium.

Kids Are Farmers For A Day

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Abby Heinz of Scranton was manning a fair craft booth with her grandmother at the Bedford Fair when she discovered the Farmer for a Day activity being sponsored by the Bedford County Farm Bureau Association.

"Abby is our steady customer," said the booth attendant. "Between this and the petting zoo, she is busy all day long."

Chores at the "farmer" booth include gathering eggs, picking apples, digging for potatoes.

Chickens were plush with plastic eggs nesting in beds of real straw. Apples were plucked from wooden trees and potatoes were found in a sawdust pile.

The petting zoo included everything from llamas to miniature horses. Visitors could purchase a $1 cup of pellets or a $2 bottle of milk to feed the animals.

Children's attractions are something the Extension office plans to expand at forthcoming Bedford County Fairs.

Brian Mihailovich, Cumberland, gathers eggs from the make-believe chicken.

Abby Heinz is a steady customer at the farmer booth.

Kids had a blast at the party Walker's Farm Service of Somerset threw for more than 1,500 people. The party is like saying a jolly "thank you" to customers.

One grown up said it was the social night of the year for farmers.

Yummy food, as much ice cream as you wanted, games, hayrides, kids tractor pull, three clowns, music, square dancing, prizes, and trophies.

One kid aiming at the dunking tank threw the ball so well, he hit the bull's eye three times. The person on the monkey seat splashed into the water tank

There were four big square boxes filled with shelled corn, money and prizes. After removing their shoes, the kids climbed into the boxes and sifted the kernels. They looked like prospectors panning for gold.

Soon the wrapped candies, quarters, dimes, nickels were making their bags heavy. Then, as coins were found more money was dropped into the corn by an adult, who walked through the corn box, unrolling coins that fell as she went.

Parents laughed as the children dug for hidden treasure. Probably some moms and dads wanted to remove their shoes and do what the kids were doing.

Pinky the Clown was a super balloon twister. She made hats that wrapped around your forehead and stuck up so high in the back you looked like an alien about to lift off for outer space. Believe me, there were scads of little aliens still running around when the party ended around 10 p.m.

By then, instead of going to the moon or Mars, most kids decided for their own beds, which pleased their parents.

Pedaling to win.

Pennsylvania Grange Youth Name New Ambassadors

CAMP SYLVAN HILLS (Centre Co.) — A shared ride to Grange Youth camp paid off huge dividends for the new youth ambassadors.

Neither Derek Schroeder of Virginville Grange #1832, Berks County, or Stephanie Harshberger, Perry Valley Grange #N1804, Perry County, knew that their riding together would play a role in them being named the 2000-01 Youth Ambassadors for the youth program of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

But it did.

Harshberger said the two passed the time riding from her home in Newport to the site of youth camp in Centre County studying for the test that determines who makes the youth ambassador court.

"As we rode up in Derek's truck, I was reading him the questions from past tests and we kind of studied as we drove to camp," Harshberger, 20, the daughter of Glenn and Patricia Harshberger, said. "I did remember some of the questions on the test by having read them to him."

Schroeder, 21, the son of Monte and Becky Schroeder of 174 German Road, Kutztown, said he used past tests to prepare for the ambassador competition.

"Before I studied I had to be sure I was eligible to compete because there is a rule that prohibits you from competing if you are 23 years old at the time you represent your state at the National Grange session," Schroeder said. "After I learned I was eligible, I studied for a couple of weeks prior to camp."

The youth ambassadors will represent the Pennsylvania State Grange at its convention this fall in Carlisle, Cumberland County, the 2001 National Grange Convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the 2001 Pennsylvania State Farm Show, the 2001 Royalty Trip and at Subordinate and Pomona Grange meetings to discuss youth department programs.

Schroeder, who is a junior at Penn State University studying animal science, said he wanted to become a youth ambassador to spread the word about what the Grange has done for him.

"The Grange is a great organization that is one big family and its members are people I know that I count on," said Schroeder, who is working a summer job at Allentown Cement Company in Evansville, Berks County. "The ritual work of the Grange is an important aspect as we remember how the Grange got started and why we do the things we do in Grange."

Harshberger, a sophomore at Lock Haven University majoring in social science, voiced similar sentiments.

"I think the Grange, with the friendships that are formed, is a really good organization in which to be a member," Harshberger said. "Especially with the way things are in the world today. It is a safe haven."

Harshberger, who is working this summer at a local day care center, is a past Lady Assistant Steward in the Junior Grange at Perry Valley, and enjoys such outdoor activities as camping and hiking. Schroeder is a past Overseer, Lecturer and Chaplain at Virginville Junior Grange, runs the audio and video system at his church, and lists big game hunting and softball as his hobbies.

Ambassador runners-up were Amy Bollinger, Virginville Grange, and David Sattazahn, Marion Grange #1853, Berks County. Other female court members were: Vicki Kieffer, Marion Grange; Marci Schaeffer, Pioneer #1777, Berks County; and Rebecca Vonada, Logan Grange #109, Centre County. Male court members were: Doug Sattazahn, Marion Grange; Paul Elliott, Hookstown #1980, Beaver County; and Andrew Kieffer, also of Marion Grange.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization dedicated to improving life in rural Pennsylvania through legislative grass-roots policies, offering member services and performing community service.

The Youth program is for members ages 14-35 and is designated to develop leadership skills through the various programs offered by the Pa. State Grange's Youth Department.

Pennsylvania State Grange Juniors Select New Royalty At Camp

CAMP SYLVAN HILLS (Centre Co.) — The annual junior Grange camp is a highlight of summer for junior Grangers.

They like camp because it is fun, they get to renew old and make new friendships and they get away from home for one week. But for the 14-year-old campers, there is the added incentive of possibly serving as the junior prince or princess.

After they take the test to see if their score is high enough to get them one of five positions on the court, they face a vigorous regiment of impromptu and written questions, the group and individual interviews and must demonstrate courteous behavior during camp before they can wear the crown.

It is, however, a worthwhile endeavor to have the chance to wear the sash and represent the junior Grange program and the Pennsylvania State Grange. Just ask the 2000-2001 Prince Matthew Vonada of Logan Junior Grange #182, Centre County, and Princess Catherine Carberry of Lincoln Junior Grange #509, Huntingdon County.

"I was surprised that I was named — even though I was hoping to get it," Vonada, the son of Dale and Ruth Vonada of 303 Ridge Road, Springs Mills, said. "Even though there is only one Junior Grange in Centre County, I want the junior program to be heard throughout Centre County."

"I really enjoy Grange because of the friends I have made at state session, state camp and at neighboring Granges," Carberry, the daughter of Doug and Destarta Carberry-Bush of James Pennsylvania State Grange Prince Matthew Vonada and Princess Catherine Carberry will represent the state at the national convention in California.

Creek RD, said. "There are a lot of great people in Grange and it is like one big family to me."

During the coming year, the two will represent the junior program at Subordinate and Pomona meetings, they will travel to the state session this fall in Carlisle, the 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg and the 2000 National Grange Session in Fresno, Calif., the November.

Hess Barbecue Wins National Awards For Innovative Dinners

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — New ideas and eye appeal mark the difference between running a mediocre catering business or one that forges ahead. Presentation also gave Hess' Barbecue the edge in national competition, according to owners Lloyd and Paul Hess.

The family-owned business walked away with the coveted top prizes and $2,000 in two contests during the recent convention of the American Association of Meat Processors (AAMP).

Two separate contests, one featuring beef and the other featuring pork, were open to AAMP members. Wanted were consumer-friendly meals that could be produced in 30 minutes or less.

"The average housewife doesn't know 45 minutes in advance what she will prepare for dinner," Lloyd, the youngest of the two brothers, explained. "The industry wanted a whole meal that the average housewife could pick up at a meat shop, take home, and prepare in 30 minutes or less."

The majority of points were given for desirable flavor and edibility, but entries also were scored on seasoning, marinating, packaging, creativity, and presentation.

All entries needed to be precooked for judging and also presented in market-ready form. Cooking instructions and ingredients needed to be included with the entry.

Before the convention, Lloyd said he scrambled to try a few ideas on his wife Barbara and their children, Kim, 15, and Eric, 15. The family favorite for the beef competition were steak tri-tips marinated in teriyaki sauce to grill, corn on the cob with herb butter, and Southwestern Jamaican bean rice.

For the pork entry, the Hess family decided on a breakfast of sweet Italian sausage and eggs in a burrito wrap served with fresh fruit.

"We were fortunate to win both," Lloyd said of the only two categories that included a cash prize of $1,000 each.

"Consumers can expect to see more creativity in years to come," Lloyd said of the meat industry.

"When it comes to food, not only must it taste good but it must look good," Lloyd said. The family business made a gradual switch from a full-fledged butcher shop to catering to as many as 10 events a day.

Paul and his wife Brenda are in charge of catering upscale weddings. Their services include fresh flowers, white tents, chairs, china, and other items needed for the event.

In 1987, the brothers took over the butcher shop their father Paul Hess Sr. began. Consumer needs were changing and the brothers soon realized they needed to pursue a different direction to stay viable. They conducted their first pork barbecue, which became so popular that butchering was soon phased out and the brothers turned to full time catering.

"We thrive on presentation. If you don't put your whole self into it, you fall behind," Lloyd said of the need to constantly think up new menus and new ways to present food.

It's this philosophy that keeps them excelling in upscale catering.

"If food looks good, it will taste good," Lloyd said of the importance of presentation.

The brothers said conventions are a great place to learn how to build buffets, set prices, and the details needed to run a successful business.

Recently Hesses purchased a portable hickory smoker that enables them serve 1,000 people within minutes.

"People like to see food being made," Lloyd said of the importance of preparing food at the site of the event.

At the AAMP convention, another Lancaster County meat processor — Stoltzfus Meats of Intercourse — also won a national award, for their sweet bologna entry in the regional meats competition.

Ozone Found To Have Direct Effect On Genes Linked With Plants' Aging

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State research has shown, for the first time, that ozone, a major smog constituent, has a direct effect on the genes associated with the aging process in plants.

Dr. Jennifer Miller, who produced the finding as part of her doctoral thesis, said, "Plant scientists have long known that ozone accelerates the process through which the leaves of a plant age, eventually die and drop. However, our work provides the first evidence that the genetic program that controls the aging process is directly affected by ozone exposure."

The findings may help other researchers find a way to bolster plants' resistance to ozone, a critical component of smog, which causes an estimated $3 billion in agricultural losses in the United States each year, she notes.

Miller conducted her experiments with Arabidopsis, a plant with a short six to eight week life span and a small gene pool that is often used in plant studies. In one experiment, she grew the plants from seed and exposed one group of plants to low levels of ozone for six hours a day while leaving another group untreated.

"The ozone treatment was higher than ambient levels but not high enough to cause visible signs of damage immediately following the exposure. Ozone concentrations in polluted areas can reach the levels used in these experiments but not usually for six hours straight," Miller explains.

The plants received ozone exposure a few days after they had produced a fifth leaf. As the leaves aged, yellowing was accelerated and growth retarded on the ozone-treated plants. Examining the plants' aging-related genes every other day during the 14-day treatment period showed that some of them were turned on earlier in the ozone-stressed plants indicating a direct effect on the plants' genetic program.

She proposes that oxidative products, the same free radicals that are thought to influence produce aging in people, also may be a possible aging cue for plants. She says, as others have shown, it may be possible to enhance ozone resistance in plants simply by selecting plant varieties with higher levels of anti-oxidants.

Mercer Tour Celebrates Bicentennial

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — The Mercer County Country Tour featuring eight stops in the Mercer area will be Saturday and Sunday, September 16 and 17. The "drive it yourself" tour features stops representative of the agriculture industry and rural community of Mercer County. Stops reflecting the history of Mercer County are also included this year in recognition of the county's Bicentennial celebration.

Participants in the free tour can make the stops in any order and stay for as little or long a time as desired. Tour hours are 1-6:30 p.m. A self-guiding tour map with descriptions and driving directions may be obtained at many area agriculture businesses and at the Mercer County Cooperative Extension office, Route 19, north of Mercer.

Stops include visits to a dairy farm, Amore Holstein Farm; the Mercer County Historical Society and Museum (Saturday, 10-3 only); Mercer County Courthouse; a hog and grain farm, the Struthers Farm; Mercer Livestock Market; Mercer County 4-H Park for food and restroom (Saturday only); Munnell Run Farm (Sunday food and restroom stop) and Rains Angus Beef Cattle; and Circle C Horse Ranch.

Two jobs, one tool: It's a tedder and a rake

The Model 255 rake tedder is a flexible machine — it's the tedder that also rakes.

- Rake a swath into a windrow
- Rake two windrows into one
- Turn windrows for faster drying
- Move crop away from fences or borders
- Ted a 10½-foot area to fluff up wet, matted-down crop for quick drying

And you can change the "255" from one function to another without tools!

Put quality silage under wraps

New Holland round bale wrappers are the low-cost alternative to traditional silage storage—they seal your silage bales in "mini silos." You can harvest silage during peak feed quality, store it with greater flexibility, and feed it more efficiently with less waste.

Choose from two models:

- Model B27P is an economic utility wrapper for medium-volume silage producers
- Model B37P is ideal for custom harvesters or operations wrapping large volumes of bales

Both offer a side-mounted lifting arm, three-belt turntable, two large side-support rollers, and cable controls. The B37P is available with computer controls.

QUESTION — E. Sheetz, Fleetwood, wants to know how to repair a burn mark on a leather table top or the name of a professional service that can fix it.

QUESTION — M. High wants to know if there's anything that will remove black spots off an iron spatula, which accidentally burned in a trash fire. The spatula was her mother's wedding present.

QUESTION — Robin Baummer needs someone to repair a braided rug with a 10x10-inch section missing. She prefers someone from the York or Adams County area.

QUESTION — G. Sweitzer wants to know what chemicals to use for treating wood damaged/infested by Eastern Subterranean Termites. Also, what chemicals are used outside the house and where can they be purchased?

ANSWER — N. Kring wanted to know how to get rid of thistles. A reader writes that she had a few patches of thistles in her garden. She sprayed a little Roundup on the top few leaves and within a week to 10 days the thistles were dead enough to pull out. Roundup is available at any hardware store. Be careful not to spray it on plants you want to keep. Do not spray when windy.

ANSWER — A reader has an old McCormick-Derringer mower, circa 1920, which they would like to paint and restore to its original color and requested a reference that includes information on restoring it and the original paint needed? Thanks to Jim Mazanic, Edmeston, N.Y., for recommending obtaining a copy of "American Farm Implements and Antiques," by C.H. Wendel. The centerfold of the book shows the original colors of all brands of machinery. This book may be available at your local public library.

Tapioca Has Rich, Sticky History

Tapioca comes from the root of the cassava plant, a tropical plant native to Brazil. You can buy quick-cooking tapioca that's usually used as a thickener in fruit pies and sometimes soups and stews.

Pearl tapioca, with larger granules, is often used to make tapioca pudding. Tapioca flour is also available. As its name implies, it's finely ground and, unlike the other forms of tapioca, dissolves completely when used as a thickener. Granules in quick-cooking and pearl tapioca become clear and gel-like when cooked, but the granules don't dissolve completely.

Quick-cooking tapioca is tailor-made for thickening soups, stews or gravy in slow cookers, because it doesn't have to be stirred to prevent it from settling. Also, it can withstand long cooking times without breaking down. Similarly, dishes made with tapioca don't lose their quality when frozen and then reheated, because the tapioca retains its thickening capabilities throughout those processes.

Tapioca is just one use from the cassava plant, whose roots are well known in the developing world as a good, reliable source of carbohydrates. In fact, because of its high drought-tolerance and ability to grow in low-fertility soils, cassava is the staple food of around 500 million people. Another advantage is that the roots can be harvested anywhere from six to eight months to three years after planting, making it a good emergency supply of carbohydrates in times of drought or famine.

Unfortunately, the raw roots and leaves of the cassava plant can be highly toxic, with bitter varieties containing much more of the toxic substance than sweet varieties. The good news is that this toxin protects the plant from pests. Peeling the roots gets rid of most of the toxin, and the rest dissipates when the roots and leaves are cooked. Tapioca is already processed to the point where the toxin is totally removed.

Pennsylvania German Classes Offered

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Classes in Pennsylvania German (Dutch), using a one-room country school concept, will begin in September, featuring language, art, music, culture and a Standard German tie-in.

The classes will meet at Maple Grove Mennonite Church, 115 Maple Grove Road, Belleville. Local Pennsylvanian German writer and scholar, Lee Thierwechter will serve as the instructor.

Ten two-hour sessions, from 7-9 p.m., will be held Fridays, September 8 through November 10. Dictionaries and text-workbooks are available.

Seminar Trains Dairy Royalty From Four States

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — "Fantastic learning experience," "very informative," "fun," "super handouts," "thanks for a great time," — were some of the comments heard and read as a new "class" of dairy royalty and their moms or committee people departed from this year's Dairy Princess Training Seminar.

Conducted by Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. (PDPPS), this training session was held recently at Lycoming College, Williamsport. Sixty-seven dairy royalty from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey and 31 adult supporters participated in three and a half days of intensive instruction on the "how tos" of dairy promotion. Led by nutritionists, media spokespersons, industry personnel, dairy farmers, and a fashion consultant, lecture sessions and workshops were held on all facets of dairy promotion as well as the many lifelong skills of public speaking, social conduct, dress and appearance.

In addition, all 67 participants presented and were critiqued on speeches for adult audiences and skits for school children, which they will use many times throughout the coming year.

Former Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Amy Mearkle (1993-94) of Bedford

County got the program rolling on Thursday morning with her Keynote Address "Quotes for Life — Under the Crown and Beyond." Using a variety of well-known quotations, she related her experiences as a dairymaid, dairy princess and state alternate and the doors they opened to her in college and as a TV reporter for WTAJ (Channel 10) — Altoona.

Reigning Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Lori Connelly with Alternates Amanda Gilkinson and Rebecca Kilgore welcomed the group with "get to know me" games and pizza party on July 5 and served as helpers and hostesses throughout the seminar. They also appeared as models for the Fashion Show, which was moderated by Melinda Johnson of Warren County. The coordinators and directors of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program kept the sessions rolling at a rapid pace and this year even the weatherman cooperated by keeping the temperatures in the low 80s.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. is supported by Pennsylvania dairy farmers through the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East, American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic, American Dairy Association, Inc. and Allied Milk Producers along with a number of independent dairies, cooperatives and agri-businesses.

Pennsylvania county Dairy Princesses will compete for the state title on September 23 at the Sheraton Hotel in Harrisburg. The milk punch reception will commence at 5:30 p.m., the banquet at 6:30 p.m. and the pageant at 8 p.m. Tickets at $20 and may be ordered from Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., 214 South Street, Clarion, Pa. 16214.

Penn State Master Gardener Open House

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Penn State Master Gardeners will hold an open house and demonstration garden tour on Saturday, September 9 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster. This event is free of charge; refreshments will be available.

Educational horticulture aspects to the day:

- The demonstration gardens, which includes annuals, perennials, container gardens, and ornamental shrubs. Master gardeners will be present in all areas to answer questions.

- A Trial Garden Program, in its second year, where the very best new and established annuals, perennials and edible plants from the University are planted in Master Gardener beds across the State. At the end of the season these evaluations will be tabulated and "Gardener Selects Plants of the Year" will be chosen.

Home gardeners will find these plants or seeds at local nurseries with the assurance that they have been tested across the Commonwealth proving their superior performance. Visit this garden where each plant is labeled and see first hand how they're doing.

- A plant clinic conducted by master gardener specialists will help solve your gardening problems. Bring in a good specimen (include some of the healthy plant along with the problem) of diseased or insect-infested plants with several of the live insects and you'll learn the solution to your plant problem.

- Informational displays with accompanying handouts.

- Door Prizes.

Record Numbers Attend Mini-Seminar

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — A record number of 148 young dairy enthusiasts, and 53 adults, from counties all across Pennsylvania assembled at Penn State's agricultural industries and science building on July 25 for a one-day training session on the do's and don'ts of dairy promotion hosted by Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. The participants ranged in age from 10-years to 20 and included a number of young men who are active dairy promoters in their home counties.

The seminar was conducted by Pennsylvania's reigning Dairy Princess Lori Connelly and Alternate Amanda Gilkinson assisted by former state royalty, Angela Werley Davis, Jennifer Dotterer, and Megan Meyers.

Emily Cloninger, this year's Centre County Princess represented the host county. Instructors are young women who know and have experienced firsthand the challenges, fears and satisfactions of successful promoting.

Sessions were held on industry knowledge, cow breeds, production and processing information, Pennsylvania dairy facts and nutrition; speaking and interviewing and on image — how to dress and act as a professional promoter.

A special session was conducted for young people who had attended the seminar in previous years and a tour of Penn State's "Ag Hill" dairy barns and facilities was enjoyed by the attending adults.

Junia Isiminger, PDPPS public relations and special promotion director, also a former county princess and alternate gave an inspirational talk to the entire group on "A Dairy Maid and Ambassador's Role in Dairy Promotion."

PDPPS, Inc. Coordinators Charlene Ranck, Betty Reibson, Wanda Yoder, Roberta McConnell, Marsha Kuhns, and directors Jan Harding and Junia Isiminger assisted with the day's

Shift In Farm Bill Philosophy Proposed

GRAND FORKS, N.D. — A change in farm policy is being spearheaded by two North Dakota senators. The shift would be toward more payments for flood control and other conservation benefits.

The Farmland Stewardship Initiative would include $25 million for demonstration projects across the country, including $5 million for pilot areas in North Dakota and Minnesota. Other proposed tryout locations are South Dakota, Vermont and California.

The proposal has support from Sens. Kent Conrad and Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., among others.

"Through the development of these pilot programs, we hope to build support for a broader shift in agriculture policy toward Farmland Stewardship in the next farm bill," Dorgan and six colleagues wrote in requesting consideration of the bill.

The "single compensation" concept would pay farmers for a range of management practices under existing programs.

The Farmland Stewardship Initiative also would seek to include "disincentives to sprawl" in some urban areas through conservation easements. In other areas, the government might pay based on the absorption of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases.

RED DEER & ELK FARM AUCTION

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 2000
Blue Knob, PA

- * Do you have land not being used to its' best potential?
- * Do you want to diversify your ground & income?
- * Do you want to increase your profit on your land?

WE MAY HAVE WHAT YOU NEED!

Over the past 18 months prices for live red deer/elk have decreased in price.

Prices now start at approx. $500.00

With the lower prices, sales have increased for trophy hunting animals.

Sales for low fat healthy elk meat is increasing. In addition, the velvet antler prices are 30% higher than last year. We can help arrange boarding, farm layout, & more. For more details contact us at:

Mgrs. Note: This dispersal represents a unique opportunity to buy top cattle.
If may very well be the best set of cattle we have sold to date. The Spaces have used A.I. young sires exclusively for many years and the results are impressive. The pedigrees are laden with 20,000# records for generations, and there are a countless number of good, solid index cattle throughout the catalog. There is tremendous production combined with show type. Simply put, this is truly an outstanding offering of Registered Holsteins. A rigid culling program has been maintained, while the top cattle have been retained to breed from. This herd is strictly intensive grazing, balage and corn silage diet. A herd commercially managed with breeder quality.Owners: ROBERT & NANCY SPACE*Pedigrees

Good Haymaking Requires Drying, Storing, And 'Patience'

ANDY ANDREWS
 Lancaster Farming Staff
 DARTINGTON, Md. — Growing good alfalfa takes a couple of things: good weather and patience, said Richard Holloway.

Along with his brother Henry and their families, Richard helps manage the 400-acre Holloway Brothers Farm, including beef cattle and crops.

The Holloways who have expanded their hay supply business this year understand that while you can't control the weather, having the right grain mix, mowing at the right time, drying it properly, and storing it properly can go a long way in the market.

Construction was finished at the end of April on a 10,000 square foot hay bale storage area. The Holloway partnership also invested recently in a hay stack wagon.

Money was spent to mechanize the Holloways' baling, storing and transporting of hay — making it readily available for customers, noted Richard and son Rick. Rick was busy cutting hay in early June at the farm.

Richard noted they can supply hay quicker than customers can take it — the reason for the on farm storage and mechanization. They see readily existing opportunities to sell their hay with the burgeoning horse farm market.

There are five horse farms within three miles that need hay and straw reg.

 P.L. Robber & Bro.

Forty years ago a group of farm industry representatives and educators formed the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) to work together for better forage programs.

This founding vision has provided the impetus for 34 states and provinces in Canada that have also formed similar organizations.

In addition to serving as an organizational model, the PFGC also started Ag Progress Days. Yes, it's true! In cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University of Agriculture and many other organizations, the first Pennsylvania Forage Progress Days event was conducted at the Milton S. Fair Happenings

2000 Denver Fair Offers Livestock Shows

The Denver Fair, presented by Henry Schein Inc., will conduct three livestock shows for 2000: The swine show, the sheep show, and the baby beef show.

Animals will be auctioned after the Baby Beef Show Friday evening. All entries should be made through the event chairperson, either by mail or by phone.

The swine show will be judged on opening day, Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 6 p.m. Exhibitor categories will include 4-H and FFA swine show, under 19 (non-4-H or FFA) swine show, and a new open swine show category. Exhibitors from Lancaster, Berks, and Lebanon counties are eligible. Swine must be in their stalls between 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, Sept. 11, and must remain on exhibit until after the animal sale on Friday, Sept. 15.

The sheep show at the Denver Fair is open to all 4-H and FFA members in Lancaster and Berks counties. Sheep should arrive Tuesday, Sept. 12 between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. They should be removed Saturday, Sept. 16 between 7 a.m. and 10 a.m. The show is Thursday, Sept. 14, at 4 p.m. in the show tent.

The baby beef show will be judged Friday, Sept. 15, at 6 p.m. This show contains two separate categories: a preview of steers not to be sold and a show of steers to be sold. This year an open show category has also been added. All steers are to be in their stalls from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 12. Removal time for all steers will be on Saturday, Sept. 16, from 7 a.m. until 10 a.m. All sale steers will be sold Friday evening following the show.

ALUMINUM PORTABLE ELEVATORS

(Not recommended for permanent installations - unless ordered with 1/4" poly-wear liner for longer pan life.)

EXCLUSIVE Boot Guard with Agitator

- Heavy-service, belt-type guard attached to sturdy hinge on boot
- Guard rests on flights - movement of flights provides agitation action - keeps material or silage out of boot and moving up the elevator

Includes incline hopper, motor mount, and required belts. Set Up and Ready to Go - Just mount motor (not included) and install shields. Optional polywear liner protects pan - super-slick, self-lubricating liner prevents freeze-down...reduces chain stretching...increases chain and pan life, cuts noise levels and lowers energy consumption by up to 30%

- Easy to handle - sturdily built
- Light weight - rust resistant - never needs painting
- Enclosed bottom trough for clean chain return and extra strength
- Take-up for chain at idler shaft - easily tightened without affecting drive adjustments
- Dropout hole with gate - helps prevent returning cobs and husks from jamming in boot end of elevator. Allows returning cobs and husks to fall out before reaching boot. Gate can be quickly closed when materials other than cob corn are being conveyed
- Plow-contour corded rubber flights designed for maximum efficiency, minimum ride-up

The unique "InLine Drive" design features an internally mounted gearbox inside of an expanded, bell shaped tube housing. Auger flighting is positioned to allow a high volume of unrestricted grain flow around the internal gearbox. A new intake design utilizes double flighting and a cupped intake guard to offer a high capacity, complete cleanout operation. A specially engineered hopper bolts directly to top of the intake guard, further enhancing the augers capacity.

The InLine Drive
Unique in design, high in efficiency.

The gearbox is located InLine with the actual auger flighting. The outer tube is expanded to allow, unobstructed and efficient flow of grain past the gear drive section. This design proves to be both economical and low maintenance in operation.

Fluffed up... never roughed up

If a storm hits while you're making hay, you'll need the New Holland Model 166 windrow inverter. It helps to dry hay fast, so you can bale or chop sooner. The "166" gently lifts, fluffs and turns windrows without roughing up the hay. So, you move your windrows onto dry ground for faster drying and retain valuable leaves.

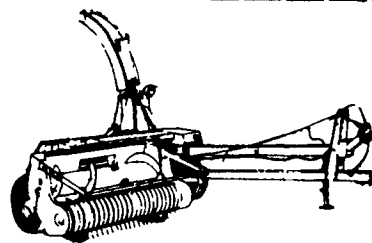

For hay that's fluffed up not roughed up, check out the "166" today.

Machinery You Need From

Introducing The New 2001 Model Axial Flow Combines Still Simply the Best.

A Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine has only ONE moving part in its entire threshing/separating process - a single large-diameter rotor. Open up the side shield on any other rotary combine and compare it to the drive mechanism, and you will see that the Case-IH rotary combine has fewer moving parts, which means fewer problems. Because the more moving parts there are, the greater your chance of breaking down.

The new 2001 model Axial-Flow Combines make you even more productive with the following enhancements:

Hydraulic Feeder Reverser

A new hydraulic feeder reverser, located on the left-hand side of the feeder jackshaft replaces the electric feeder reverser on previous models. The reverser will deliver 50% more torque to the feeder driveshaft compared to the output of the electric reverser.

Side Adjust Sieve Ready - All Models

The 2001 model combines will be ready to accept a future side adjust sieve feature. This will be available as a Service Parts Kit.

New View Door and Light

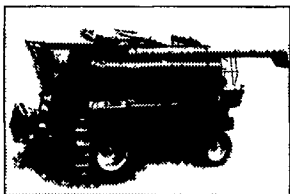

The 2001 models will have a new side-viewing door with a light for easier visibility of the chopper and chaffer sieves.

12 Row Corn Head Capable

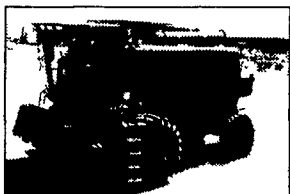

Factory options are available for the 2001 model 2388 to be capable of handling the size and weight of the 2200 series 12 row corn heads.

New Fuel Tank

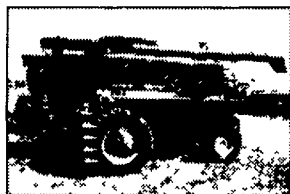

The 2001 Model 2388 combines will have a new 180 gallon fuel tank - a 46% increase in capacity over the 123 gallon tank on previous models.

Meeting all your harvesting needs!

Chopping quality is extremely important for silage and also digestion of the feed. Sharp knives and a precisely adjusted shearbar guarantee a clean cut and even crop flow. Four intake and precompression rollers - two upper and two lower rollers - compress the crop densely and transport it to the chopping cylinder. The latest generation of metal detectors is located in the lower front roller. The gearbox provides for 6 different chop lengths. The changeover between two lengths in each range can be done at the touch of a button. The impressive CLAAS chopping cylinder on all JAGUAR models is a full 29.5" wide with 24 knives in V-formation gives 28,800 cuts per minute. The shearbar is adjusted to the knives without tools

The result is ease of maintenance, with contact adjustment and a power saving cut, plus excellent forage quality.

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference to open up virtually every kernel. This means good quality silage that is easily digested.

YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE

the name means quality

PURCHASE GREAT GEHL EQUIPMENT AND WE'LL DONATE $100 TO FFA IN YOUR NAME!

Give tomorrow's crop a head start.

BUY INTO A BETTER FUTURE WITH GEHL AND FFA!

A little help goes a long way. That's why Gehl is donating to the FFA chapter of your choice. Simply purchase a new Gehl ag product* between July 2, and Sept. 30, 2000 and we will donate $100 in your name!

As an ongoing sponsor of the FFA Forage Proficiency Award, Gehl realizes the importance of investing in the future of agriculture. And that's why Gehl is the right choice for today's (and tomorrow's) farming operation. But don't wait! Stop in soon for complete program details.

Gehl Skid Loader – 25 Years of Innovation, Performance

Established in 1859, Gehl Company is known for innovation and reliability. In 1973, the company applied these same principles to the first skid loader that rolled out of its Madison, S.D. plant. Continuously improved, the Gehl SL line-up now represents the most significant advances in the history of skid loader design. In broad range of operations - construction, industrial, rental and agriculture - Gehl is the unity of choice when it comes to overall performance, efficiency and operator comfort.

Gehl's two largest skid loaders, the Models 5635 and 6635, have been improved for the year 2000. Designated as "Series-11" models, these popular job-site mainstays now deliver even better performance and smoother operation.

Standard SAE lift capacities have been increased to 1,900 and 2,350 pounds. Optional weight kits raise capacities to 2,200 and 2,650 pounds.

Higher hydraulic pressures result in better attachment performance and increased breakout force. Standard auxiliary hydraulic flow has increased 15 percent to 23 gpm while the optional high-flow auxiliary hydraulic system is up 9 percent to 36 gpm.

These improved system hydraulics mean faster cycle times, by as much as 15 percent, over previous models. A host of new convenience and serviceability features have also been incorporated into the "Series II" skid loader units.

Additionally, the Gehl Model 4635SX is now available with a turbo-charged diesel option. Identified as a 4635 SXT, this new configuration boasts 57-hp with a 1,425 pound SAE operating capacity. Counterweights increase that capacity to 1,575 pounds.

Reliable Gehl skid loaders have been proving their worth on farms and ranches for over 25 years. Today, Gehl builds six models, ranging from 28- to 80-hp with SAE operating capacities from 950 to 2,650 lbs. All units are available with Gehl's precise, easy-to-use "hands only" control system. The four largest "35 Series" models can also be equipped with hand/foot or dual-hand controls.

All Gehl skid loaders feature a padded operator restraint bar for added safety and operating comfort. Plus an easy roll-back cab delivers unmatched access to the drive and hydraulic components.

Gehl "35-Series" loaders offer a spacious, comfortable cab with unequalled side visibility. A large rear window and low-profile engine cover improve rear sight lines.

Plus, a grid section in the roof delivers additional bucket visibility at full lift height while the "cab forward" design offers a better look at the bucket's cutting edge. These units are equipped with powerful, low-maintenance, fuel-efficient oil-cooled Deutz diesel engines.

Gehl's All-Tach™ universal quick-attach system is compatible with most competitive attachments. It makes changing attachments a breeze.

With a huge assortment of attachments available, there's one to handle virtually any job. And with Gehl's high-flow hydraulic system (available on DX models), there's even more muscle to power high-performance and heavy-duty attachments.

Guest Auctioneer Takes Champion Bids In Tioga County

Ed Cornell of Cornell Brothers Feeds purchased the grand champion market steer from Katlyn Tice for $1.35 per pound.

The reserve grand champion market hog was sold by Matt Foster and purchased by Tim Oppen of Dietrichs Milk Products.

Guest Auctioneer LeRoy VanDyke stepped off the podium to pose with Becca Foster and her grand champion market hog. The animal was purchased by Gilbert Harris, representing Hatfield Quality Meats.

Ag Choice Farm Credit, represented by Bonnie Kiel, purchased the reserve grand champion market goat from Allison Gorenflo.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

WHITNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) — Bidders at the 2000 Tioga County Fair Junior Livestock Auction were also amused by the antics of guest auctioneer LeRoy VanDyke, a noted singer and entertainer who was slated to perform for fairgoers later that evening.

VanDyke donated his time to sell the champion and reserve champion steer, market hog, market lamb, and market goat before turning over the stage to veteran auctioneer Tim Kaltenbach.

Prices for the champions remained high, with the grand champion market steer commanding a price of $1.35 per pound. Katlyn Tice sold the 1,084-pound animal to Cornell Brothers Feeds.

The reserve grand champion market steer cashed in at $1 per pound. That steer also weighed 1,084 pounds and was raised by LeeAnn Tice. C&N Bank purchased the animal.

Overall, 23 steers averaged $.85 per pound, with the grand champion commanding the highest price and two light-weight steers bringing a low of $.70 per pound.

Bids for the grand champion market hog ended at $2.40 per pound. Hatfield Quality Meats purchased the 259-pound animal from Becca Foster. Reserve grand champion hog brought a $2 bid from Dietrichs Milk Products. That market animal was raised by Matt Foster and tipped the scales at 265 pounds.

In total, 47 market hogs crossed the auction block, bringing an average price of $.88 per pound. Once again, the champion brought the high bid and the low bid of $.55 per pound was taken on two hogs.

The reserve grand champion market lamb edged out the champion to capture the high bid of the sale. Shane Zerby sold his 112-pound reserve champion lamb to Woods Excavating Service for $6.25 per pound. The grand champion market lamb was sold by Melissa Smith, and brought $5.25 per pound from First Citizens National Bank.

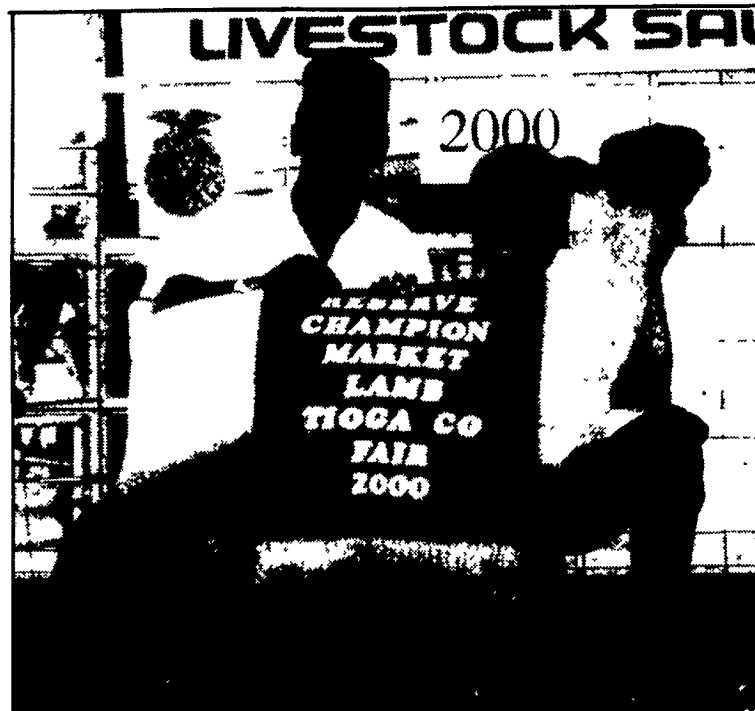

Sixteen lambs sold for an average price of $1.78 per pound, with a low bid of $1.05.

Allison Gorenflo sold both the champion and reserve champion market goat. Her 58-pound champion brought $7.50 per pound from C&N Bank. The reserve grand champion goat brought $7.25 per pound. The 68-pound animal was purchased by Ag Choice Farm Credit. In total, 14 market goats crossed the auction block, with the champion commanding the highest price. The average price was $2.91 with the low bid registering at $1 per pound.

Eight breeds of dairy cattle were also represented in the 2000 milk auction, with proceeds supporting the youth programs, the owner of the animal, and 4-H or FFA. The highest bid of $400 was reached by the Jersey champion, owned by Trisha McIlwain and the Guernsey champion, owned by Jordy McIlwain. Brooks Forest Products purchased the gallon jug of milk from Trisha McIlwain. Reed's Feed Mill purchased Jordy McIlwain's gallon jug. The average price on all the lots was $271, with the low price ringing in at $150.

First Citizens National Bank, represented by Shari Johnson, bought the grand champion market lamb for $5.25 per pound.

Woods Excavating Service, represented by Marty Wood, purchased the reserve grand champion market lamb from Shane Zerby.

LeeAnn Tice sold her reserve grand champion market steer to C&N Bank, represented by Nick Helf.

C&N Bank purchased the grand champion market goat from Allison Gorenflo. Shown here are guest auctioneer and entertainer LeRoy VanDyke, Nick Helf of C&N Bank, and Gorenflo.

Gor-Wood-D Holsteins Captures Banners At Northeast Championship Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent
TROY (Bradford Co.) — Gor-Wood-D Holsteins garnered both the premier breeder and premier exhibitor banners at the 2000 Northeast Pennsylvania Holstein Championship show.

The 27th annual show was conducted Friday, Aug. 18, at the Troy Fairgrounds.

Dennis Ferguson, Dryden, N.Y., sorted through the 92 entries and tapped Pack Herd Encore Bell Toll, a 4-year-old owned by Pack Herd Holsteins, to be the grand champion of the show. Named the reserve grand champion was Gor-Wood-D Holsteins' aged cow, Gor-Wood-

D Stardom Molly.

The junior champion of the open show was Lynn and Bonnie Miller's Royal Haven Warner Basque, a fall calf. Named the reserve junior champion was Mark Hammond's JB-SG Progress Lady, a spring calf.

In the youth division, Chris Jackson's Ridge Nook Horace Janet, a 5-year-old, took home grand champion honors. Following her in the reserve champion spot was Calkins Farm Mandelin Nikkie, a junior 2-year-old owned by Ryan Calkins.

Equipment Manufacturer Plans New Robotic Milker

MADISON, Wis. — Bou-Matic, a manufacturer of premium milking and milk cooling equipment in North America, announces the addition of robotic milking systems to its product portfolio.

Throughout its history Bou-Matic has held true to a philosophy known as the Bou-Matic Principle: The milking machine should remove the available milk from the cow's udder gently and quickly. This has been illustrated many times through product innovations for the dairy industry, including the industry's first electronic cup removers (detachers), the first electronic milk meter, the first dairy herd management computer, and the patented Smart ID system, which provides unmatched cow data accuracy.

Once again taking the lead when it comes to dairy equipment innovation, Bou-Matic announces that it has reached an agreement with Lely allowing Bou-Matic access to the premiere robotic milker technology available. Lely is a leading provider of robotic milking systems worldwide. The Bou-Matic robotic milking system, based on Lely technology, will be manufactured in England. However, it will be distinctly different from robotic milking systems commonly used in Europe.

"Robotic milking systems are a logical extension of our product portfolio and we plan to incorporate Bou-Matic's world-renowned engineering excellence, concern for cow health, and dedication to good milking principles into our design," said Robert A. Kmoch, president, Bou-Matic.

With an established dealer network already in place, Bou-Matic is poised to be the industry leader when it comes to robotic milking systems for North American and similarly-styled dairies. According to Kmoch, "Our intent is to offer — through our robotic-certified Bou-Matic dealers — a premium robotic milker specifically designed for North American dairies."

Agco Completes First Decade Of Excellence

ATLANTA, Ga. — Agco Corporation (NYSE: AG), a major worldwide designer, manufacturer and distributor of agricultural equipment, is celebrating its 10-year anniversary.

Heralded as its first decade of excellence, Agco has grown in yearly revenue from a modest $200 million in 1990 to more than $3 billion over the past decade. Agco has more than 8200 dealers in 140 countries worldwide.

"Our roots in agriculture are deep and rich with heritage, but our character is still young and full of energy," said Robert J. Ratliff, Executive Chairman of the Board. "With some Agco brands more than 150 years old, it is refreshing to see new and exciting products coming to the market from those lines."

Agco was formed in 1990 by a management buyout of the former Deutz-Allis Corporation. Ratliff, along with others on a management team, purchased the company that traced its lineage to the historic Allis-Chalmers Company.

"It was a leap of faith when we created the concept of Agco," said Ratliff. "We had grand visions for the Company and a plan to grow in both size and profits, and we've done that. Employees, dealers, suppliers and customers joined in this new movement to add energy and commitment to create the largest farm equipment distribution in the world."

Since 1990, Agco has pioneered the multi-brand strategy when Ratliff and his team completed the purchase of Deutz-Allis, which included Gleaner combines. "From that initial purchase, we recognized that the key to Agco's success was a quality dealer network," Ratliff said. "And, at that time, we made the key decision on the multi-brand marketing."

In 1991, Agco made its first acquisition after the initial buyout. Hesston provided the Company with a brand that had been known for nearly half a century as a pioneer in hay and forage equipment. "At that time, some early competitors were beginning to take note of this new company, called Agco," Ratliff commented. Agco also acquired the White tractor division from Allied Products, adding a line of dependable, durable and efficient tractors.

Just two years later in 1993, Agco made a second purchase from Allied Products of the White — New Idea line of planters, hay equipment and manure spreaders. "This acquisition added even more history to our young company as New Idea was founded in 1899," Ratliff said.

The year 1994 was historic for the Company with the worldwide acquisition of Massey Ferguson tractors, arguable the world's most popular tractor brand. "Massey Ferguson really gave Agco a worldwide presence in farm machinery," Ratliff commented. "More Massey Ferguson tractors are used today than any other tractor in the world, and this acquisition really propelled Agco to the forefront of the international equipment industry." Massey Ferguson tractors and implements solidified Agco's position as a major player in the farm equipment business. Agco also purchased McConnell tractors, which resulted in the development of the AgcoStar articulated tractor line.

In 1995, Agco purchased the brands within AgEquipment Group including Tye, Glencoe and Farmhand, which brought seed drills, loaders, and tillage equipment into the Agco family. In 1996, Agco acquired Iochpe-

Steiger Tractors Raise Industry Standards

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH STX Series Steiger tractors may change the way farmers think about four-wheel-drive (4WD) tractors.

With new advancements in steering, diagnostics, track design, comfort, and serviceability, STX Series tractors are designed to help farmers maximize their productivity.

"These tractors add new dimensions to 4WD maneuverability, performance, versatility, and comfort," said Jan Rintamaki, Case IH director of application marketing for the cash grains segment. "In the STX line, we offer tractors that handle like today's most advanced two-wheel-drives, as well as the industry's highest engine and drawbar horsepower."

"From the start, our goal with our new tractor line was to find ways to help our customers maximize their productivity," he said. "The STX Series 4WD design originated with input from more than 2,200 farmers. Case IH engineers used their ideas to build a high production tractor to help our customers succeed and complete our range of tractors."

Traditionally, 4WD tractors have been associated with high horsepower for increased productivity, but they haven't been considered for row-crop work. The Case IH exclusive AccuSteer® precision steering system removes that limitation. A patent-pending, double articulation design allows the front frame to pivot independently of the articulation steering, creating a more intuitive and more precise steering option.

"For farmers, this means they will be able to make in-row steering corrections without articulating the tractor," said Mitch Kaiser, manager of product planning for large tractors. "Customers will enjoy a 12.4-foot turning radius — the tightest in the industry."

In addition, AccuSteer is gentler on crops, implements, and operators. The precision steering system improves tractor handling and reduces implement sway. AccuSteer is available on the STX275 and STX325 models, which easily handle the largest planters and cultivators in today's market.

High-production crop farmers have a new tool to aid their productivity. The STX275 AccuSteer tractor with a Case IH 2220 cultivator offer industry-exclusive AccuSteer precision steering. This new technology allows STX Series tractors to turn with the ease of a two-wheel-drive tractor, helping to reduce operator fatigue, cultivator blight, and implement wear.

STX Series tractors also answer the traditional need for power and productivity. Leading the industry is the STX440, rated at 440 engine horsepower with up to 43 percent engine torque rise and 40 horsepower power growth.

All four STX Series models — the STX275 (275 engine hp), STX325 (325 engine hp), STX375 (375 engine hp), and STX440 (440 engine hp) — feature full-authority fuel injection engines to monitor and continuously optimize engine performance, increasing productivity and efficiency.

"Farmers told us they didn't just want more horsepower — they wanted a tractor that puts power on the ground better," noted Kaiser. "Because of their new design, STX Series tractors effectively transfer power to where farmers need it most."

The design features a lengthened wheelbase and drawbar to increase stability and improve the pull angle, providing more pulling power with less effort. Larger tire and wider track options improve traction, allowing STX Series tractors to pull through more conditions with less effort. In addition, all four engines are rated at 2,000 RPM.

A lower engine speed improves fuel economy, increases engine life and creates less noise.

"During the peak periods of land preparation, planting, seeding and harvest, farmers spend more time in their mobile office than they do in their home office," said Kaiser. "Our customers asked us for an 'office' in the field where they could work comfortably all day and into the night."

With a cab volume 23 percent larger than the nearest competitor, a farmer can easily spend time in the cab training an additional operator, especially with the optional wide training seat in the Surveyor cab.

Case IH exclusive High Intensity Discharge (HID) lighting helps operators to easily work into the night. A 300-gallon fuel capacity combined with higher fuel efficiency allows for up to 22 hours of operation without refueling.

Ergonomically optimized controls and display monitors — like those found in Axial-Flow combines and MX Series Magnum tractors — allow easy operation and help reduce fatigue. Automatic temperature control, a heated Optima seat, and a luxury cab option provide additional creature comforts.

The STX Series Steiger line features 16-speed powershift transmission. Operators enjoy fingertip control, electronic shifting with memory controls, and the capability to start in any of the first eight gears.

"If you're making fine speed adjustments in the field, the Case IH transmission provides nine working speeds between three and eight MPH, with half MPH speed splits," said Kaiser. "On the other hand, if you're in transport you can reach 23 MPH faster with the exclusive Autoskip™ shift function, which skips every other gear."

In addition to standard wheel versions, the STX Series Steiger line offers specially designed models and option packages to meet every application need, whether it be in cereal grains operation, row-crop farming, or agricultural and laser land-leveling.

Maxion in Brazil, the number one market leader in tractors. By 1997, Agco completed the acquisition of Deutz Argentina, Dronningborg Industries and Fendt. The Dronningborg technology enhanced Agco's leadership position in the field of precision agriculture technology. With the Fieldstar precision agriculture system, today, farmers have the ability to utilize the equipment in planting, spraying and harvesting applications.

"The Fendt acquisition truly gave Agco a leader in tractor technology. With its revolutionary Vario transmission, Fendt is changing the way of high-intense farming," Ratliff said. Fendt holds the number one market share in Germany and was recently introduced in North America.

By 1998, Agco further enhanced its equipment line with the acquisition of SpraCoupe and Willmar self-propelled sprayers, spreaders and tenders.

"Agco has adopted, developed and thrived with our multi-brand strategy. We've been profitable, which in this industry, has not been an easy task," Ratliff said. "And, we will continue to seek acquisition opportunities that are important to our business."

Much history has been packed into only 10 short years. Agco has continued to challenge the old notions of agricultural business with a fresh approach to new ideas, products and an eye toward innovation. The Agco philosophy of recognizing opportunity and acting upon it creates a business ideal for its customers, dealers and investors.

Collectively, these efforts have written a new chapter in the farm equipment history and provided the foundation for continued progress and achievement for Agco. "We look forward to our next 10 years with the same enthusiasm and dedication that has created this major player in the worldwide farm equipment industry," Ratliff said.

Agco Corporation, headquartered in Duluth, Georgia, is a global designer, manufacturer and distributor of agricultural equipment and related replacement parts. Agco products are distributed in 140 countries. Agco offers a full product line including tractors, combines, hay tools, sprayers, forage equipment and implements through more than 8,200 independent dealers and distributors around the world. Agco's products are distributed under the brand names Agco®Allis, Massey Ferguson®, Hesston®, White, Gleaner®, New Idea®, Agcostar®, Tye®, Farmhand®, Glencoe®, Deutz Allis (South America), Fendt®, SpraCoupe® and Willmar®. Agco provides retail financing through its Agco Finance joint venture in North America and through its Agri-credit joint ventures in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Spain and Brazil. In 1999, Agco had sales of $2.4 billion.

OSU Ag Economist Proposes 'NAFTA Dollar'

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The three member nations of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) should follow Europe by adopting its own common currency, said agricultural economist Luther Tweeten, Ohio State University.

"Maybe we could call it the 'NAFTA dollar,'" the ag economist said.

A common currency would help farmers in Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. by easing the impact of fluctuating international currency rates that affect the value of products sold in cross-border trade, Tweeten said. Farming is already one of the riskiest businesses because of unpredictable weather, pests and markets, and a single currency would provide at least one aspect of stability, he said.

"My proposal would reduce what we call 'exchange rate risk' in agriculture," Tweeten said. "It's one of the instabilities in the market we wouldn't have to put up with anymore. We could do away with that if we had a common currency."

Tweeten, who has argued the case to U.S. trade policymakers, said that a common currency should be the next level for discussion between the three nations, which formed the world's second largest free-trade zone in 1994, although there's still more work to be done on reducing trade barriers.

"If France and Germany in the European Union (EU) can get together despite historical animosities that run long and deep, I think surely we can get together," the ag economist said.

The EU, which is the largest free-trade zone, adopted a common currency, the euro, on Jan. 1, 1999. And talk of a common currency is a hot topic among economists, business people and finance ministers in other parts of the world, thus dispelling the notion "it's a revolutionary thing," Tweeten said.

For example, this summer Ecuador boldly adopted the U.S. dollar as its official currency as a step against hyperinflation; to stop devaluation of the national currency, the sucre; and to promote foreign investment in the South American nation.

A common currency is a great facilitator for trade and investment, and "I think ultimately it's good for the world," Tweeten said. Although transitioning to a common currency should be high on NAFTA's agenda, Tweeten said there's plenty of other "trouble spots" on the agricultural front that hinder NAFTA's original purpose to promote free trade. In other words, some policy tweaking is in order, he said.

1. One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2. Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion
3. Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4. G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint. G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5. Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6. Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed. Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years).
7. Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F
8. Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53.37 Per Square $1.69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$1.48 PER LINEAL FT.

BEEF TIPS

Simmental carcass evaluation program continues

15 Simmental bulls were randomly mated to 164 cows and heifers at the Sheek Ranch, Cabool, Missouri. They were fed for 166 days at Timmerman's Feedyard in Nebraska. They were slaughtered at IBP, Iowa. Results: gain, 3.24 lbs./day; average inches; average yield grade, 3.0 with 80% standard grade. Average carcass weight was 806 pounds and the average back fat was .57 inches. American Simmental Association carcass studies continue and include meat tenderness and taste studies by sire.

SWEETCAKE 16NU

FEED SUPPLEMENT BLOCKS FOR THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

- High Natural Protein • No Urea • Fat Enhanced
- Balanced Supplementation • Safe For All Livestock Classes

Sweetcake Advantages

- Aids in making the best use of your available forage
- Promotes a more even herd consumption, with 24-hour availability to all cattle
- Reduces labor to save you money and give you more time to make important management decisions
- Supplies much-needed vitamins and minerals that forage lacks to help your cattle perform to their genetic potential
- Supplies fat in most formulations to enhance energy intake

For Dairy

- Replacement heifers that grow out soundly and economically
- Body condition on dry cows so they can return to lactation, producing at the maximum potential
- Healthier herds, with essential trace minerals that help prevent metritis, retained placenta and other health problems

- Prompt re-breeding, thanks to essential nutrients

For Beef

- Stronger, healthier calves at birth
- Heavier Calves at weaning
- Cows that cycle better for improved conception rates

- Cows that milk better to raise a better calf

- AVAILABLE IN 200 LB. SIZE -

Attention Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers! New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorptions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans, Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributors of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Are you looking for a good harvest after last year's drought?

Our John Deere 9600 4WD Contour Master combine with low engine/separators hours and large threshing and cleaning capacity will put more clean grain in the tank and leave less behind in the field. Chopper and chaff spreader will also distribute crop residue evenly allowing your soil to dry out and warm up faster in the spring which will allow you a head start next year.

Let me help Maximize your profit potential! Few combines can offer all of these features for 24 dollars per acre. Doing the job right. Satisfaction guaranteed.

A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITY.

The Mountain called First Union rises above the financial world, giving you the chance to reach your potential - and more. Our rapid expansion has created opportunities in the following areas

Part-time and Roving Tellers

Your superior customer service skills, cash handling experience and natural sales ability make you an excellent candidate for a Teller position. Roving tellers travel from branch to branch, therefore, prior teller experience and/or customer service experience is preferred. Additional benefits for Roving Tellers are mileage reimbursement and shift differential. Working with First Union, you'll get some of the best benefits in the industry including benefits for 20 or more hours/week, scheduling options, competitive pay, incentive pay, paid holidays, tuition reimbursement and a professional working environment.

Financial Specialists

First Union is looking for you if you have a proven track record in product/service sales and want to work with the leader of the financial world. Among the ways you are rewarded is with the training needed to be as successful as you want, by selling the industry's most innovative financial products. You also get an excellent compensation and benefits package. Series 6/63 required (or willingness to obtain)

INVITATION FOR BIDS

The Juniata County Conservation District requesting bids for the construction of a manure storage system (concrete tank) to be funded in part by the Chesapeake Bay Program. The construction of this project is expected to start by the middle of October. The site is located in Tuscarora Township, Juniata County, along State Route 75, 2.5 miles North of Honey Grove, near the intersection of Route 75 and Route 3006 (Mountain Road), at the Robert Bailor Farm.

There will be a site showing at 11:00 AM on September 1, 2000 at the site location. All contractors interested in the project are encouraged to attend. There will be design engineers from NRCS present to answer any questions or hear any comments from those in attendance. Prospective contractors will receive a bid package which contains instructions to bidders, a sample contract form, the plans and specifications for the project, and bid sheet. Bid packages will also be available by request before and after the site showing.

Small and minority business and women's business enterprises are encouraged to respond to this invitation for bids.

The bid opening will be held at the Juniata County Conservation District Office, Smith Road, RR 3, Box 302, Mifflintown, PA 17059-9609 on September 18, 2000 at 12:00 PM.

To obtain a bid package or for further information, contact the Juniata County Conservation District at Juniata Co. Conservation District RR 3, Box 302, Mifflintown, PA 17059 (717) 436-8953 Ext. 5

Sealed bids will be received by the East Cocalico Township Authority until 2:00 p.m., September 14, 2000, at which time and place the bids will be opened and immediately read aloud in the East Cocalico Township meeting room, 102 Hill Road, Denver, PA or the sale of the following equipment:

- 1989 Ford Heavy Duty F150 4x4 1/2 Ton Pickup Truck
- As of 8/1/00, odometer reading is 75,375
- Sold in "as is" condition, no guarantee furnished

Specifications and bid forms may be obtained and/or examined at the Office of the Authority, 102 Hill Road, Denver, Pennsylvania.

The Authority reserves the right to reject any or all bids, to waive any technical defects, and to accept any bid that it may deem to be in the best interest of the Authority.

The Owner will notify the successful bidder in writing within 10 days of the contract award.

The East Cocalico Township Authority Board will consider awarding the contract at the September 14, 2000 Board meeting beginning at 7:00 p.m. in the Township meeting room.

BY ORDER OF THE EAST COCALICO TOWNSHIP AUTHORITY

Daniel J. Becker, Secretary

Pine Grove area money maker!! This poultry & veal farm is ideal for a family with growing children to learn the spirit of being independent. This property with the two contracts will surely help you achieve independence. There are 232 veal and 70,000+ broilers. When the chicks are small you spend about 1 hr per day up to 3 or 4 hrs when ready for market. The veal takes a bit more time but this operation still leaves you time for family & fun. The house has a new roof, large living-family room and a large eat-in kitchen. Price has been reduced so call for a look!

Union Co. - This 31 acre tract in "Clean & Green" has low taxes and is ready for you to build your veal, poultry or horse farm estate. You choose what you want to build and let's talk turkey. Owner is ready for a settlement as soon as the crops are harvested. In the meantime you can have your plans and permits ready for constructing your estate. This property has stream and the farmers in the area tell me it is the best soil in all of Union County.

Needs are still growing.

We Still Have One Foot In the Furrow

What was true in President Eisenhower's time is even more true today. In a country where the productivity of the American farmer enables 97% of this nation's population to not farm, it is all too common for politicians, bureaucrats, and special interest groups to try to sit behind a desk and farm with a pencil. Pollution and tillage regulations continue to place greater restrictions on the most productive sector of our country.

At Hooper, Inc. we run our business with one foot in the furrow because we believe the only way to know what's happening on the farm and in the field is to be on the farm and in the field. We understand the needs and problems farmers face in today's environment because we go to the farm to talk to and work with farmers. And when policies or regulations affect the farming community and the way you do your work, be assured that Hooper, Inc. will be there with the equipment you need to be more productive and efficient in spite of those who plow with a pencil 1,000 miles from the farm.

"FARMING LOOKS
PENCIL, AND YOU'RE A
FROM THE FIELD."

The Nutrient Management Reference Guide

2000 Edition Introduction

Nutrient management is a key issue that will continue to affect farms in Pennsylvania and surrounding states. Regulations are becoming stricter to prevent nutrient runoff and streamwater contamination.

To help farmers comply with regulations and to help them their role in understand nutrient management, Lancaster Farming has compiled this second addition of "The Nutrient Management Reference Guide."

The guide includes valuable information and advice on developing and maintaining a nutrient management plan on your farm. It also lists resources to help you get started in nutrient management planning. Issues affecting farmers and ways to deal with excess nutrients are also addressed.

The staff of Lancaster Farming thanks the many contributors to this book, including experts from the Penn State University, Cornell University, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the State Soil Commission, local conservation districts, extension offices, and in private practices.

"The Nutrient Management Reference Guide" was published as a supplement to the August 19, 2000, issue of the Lancaster Farming. It will be made available at area trade shows where the Lancaster Farming exhibits.

Identifying Your Animal Operation

Are You A CAFO Or An AFO?

The Act states that “concentrated animal operations” will be required to develop and maintain a nutrient management plan. Concentrated animal operations (CAO) are defined as agricultural operations where the animal density exceeds two animal equivalent units (AEU) per acre on an annualized basis.

An AEU is 1,000 pounds of live weight of any animal. Table 1 lists standard animal weights that are to be used to calculate AEUs, unless the farmer has records of actual weights of the animals on the farm. The calculation involves determining the number of AEUs of production animals on the farm and then adjusting that for the actual number of days (out of 365) that manure is typically produced.

To determine the number of AEUs on a farm, the following formula can be used:

$$\begin{aligned} \text{Total AEUs for each type of animal} = & \\ & [\text{number of animals (average on a typical production day)} \\ & \times \text{animal weight (lb.)} \div 1,000] \\ & \times [\text{number of production days per year} \div 365] \end{aligned}$$

The total number of acres of land suitable for the application of manure must also be determined prior to calculating the animal units per acre.

According to the regulations, the acres that can be included in this calculation are:

- cropland, hay land, or pastureland (owned or rented) that is an integral part of the operation
- land that is, or will be, used for the application of manure from the operation

Farmstead and forestland cannot be included in this calculation as land suitable for manure application.

The number of acres that meet the criteria listed above are then divided into AEUs to determine the animal density. Use the blank worksheet on page 4 to calculate the animal density on your farm.

A CAO in existence prior to October 1, 1997 must submit a nutrient management plan for the operation. A CAO that comes into existence after October 1, 1977 must submit a nutrient management plan prior to the commencement of manure operations. For new operations it is recommended that the CAO submit the plan for review and approval prior to construction.

An agricultural operation that, because of expansion of animal units or loss of land suitable for manure application, meets the criteria for a CAO must submit a nutrient management plan within three months after the date of completion of the expansion or the loss of land. It is recommended that an operator who intends to expand an existing agricultural operation submit the plan for review and approval prior to expansion.

This example farm would be defined as a CAO and would be required to develop and implement a nutrient management plan. The animal density criterion is not to be construed as prohibiting development or expansion of agricultural operations that would exceed the criterion. It simply means that these operations will be required to have an approved nutrient management plan.

The criterion of two AEUs per acre is a fairly high animal density. Farms with a higher density are likely to have more

EXAMPLE CAO CALCULATIONS

The following is an example of an AEU per acre calculation

Example farm data

Animal inventory: 110 dairy cows @ 1,300 lb average weight each 35 heifers @ 900 lb average weight each
 20 calves @ 375 lb average weight each
 15,000 heavy broilers @ 3 lb average weight each

Production period: Cows = 365 day per year
 Broilers = 5 flocks for 57 days each, or 285 days per year

Land inventory: Farmstead = 5 acres
 Woodland = 3 acres
 Pasture = 4 acres
 Cropland, home farm = 60 acres
 Cropland, rented farm = 36 acres

Using this example data and the worksheet, the calculation of animal density (AEUs per acre) for this farm would be as follows

Animal type	No. animals	x animal weight (lb)	x prod. days	- factor =	AEU
Dairy	110	x 1300	x 365	- 365,000 =	143.0
Heifers	35	x 900	x 365	- 365,000 =	31.5
Calves	20	x 375	x 365	- 365,000 =	7.5
Broilers	15,000	x 3	x 285	- 365,000 =	35.14
		x	x	- 365,000 =
		x	x	- 365,000 =
		x	x	- 365,000 =
			Total =		217.14
			Acres available for manure*		- 100
			AEUs/acre		= 2.17

*Includes only cropland and pastures nutrients than can be fully used by the crops grown on the farm. Thus, nutrient management plans often will describe on-farm manure utilization, and procedures for moving some manure off the farm.

Other Required Plans

Farms receiving financial assistance for nutrient management, such as from the Chesapeake Bay Program, will be required to have a nutrient management plan. Any farm that violates the Clean Streams Law also may be required to develop a nutrient management plan.

Voluntary Plans

Farms with fewer than two AEUs per acre are encouraged to voluntarily develop nutrient management plans. Nutrient management plans, whether required or voluntary, can improve farm profits, help protect the environment, provide some protection from liability, and enhance the image with the general public of agriculture as a good steward of our natural resources.

A Step By Step Approach To Developing A Nutrient Management Plan

Whether written on paper or developed with computer software, the key concept is that a nutrient management plan allocates the available manure nutrients in a way that maximizes the economic benefit of the nutrients while minimizing their environmental impact.

The basic steps in developing a nutrient management plan are as follows:

I. Collect information about the manure production, nutrient content, and application system(s) for the farm.

Many factors affect the amount of manure produced and the nutrients it contains. These include the type of animal and its age, ration, and feed consumption; the animal's management, including the bedding used and the length of time the animal is confined as the manure is collected; and the handling of the manure before and during field application, including potential drying and dilution by waste water or precipitation.

Manure production can best be determined by measuring the amount of manure contained in a manure storage. On farms that do not have a storage or when it is impossible to determine the amount in a storage, manure production can be estimated from animal numbers, animal weights, and confinement times.

Manure nutrient content should be determined by a manure analysis. "Book" values for the nutrient content of a given type of manure are averages taken from many farms. Because of farm-to-farm variability, these averages are of little value in decision making on an individual farm. Manure sample analysis results in Pennsylvania have indicated a very wide range in nutrient content for seemingly similar samples of manure taken from different farms, and we have observed as much as 100 percent error between book values and actual manure nutrient content values.

II. Determine the availability of manure nutrients.

The actual fertilizer value of the manure will depend on how the manure is handled and used. The nutrients in manure are not as readily available as fertilizer nutrients are, and this must be taken into account when manure application rates are determined.

Manure nitrogen is especially susceptible to losses and is very sensitive to management practices such as soil incorporation following application. For example, if dairy manure is incorporated on the same day that it is spread, about half of its N will be as readily available as commercial fertilizer N would be. If this manure is left on the surface with no incorporation for a week or more, however, only 20 percent of the N will be available for crop uptake.

III. Determine the nutrient requirements for the crops on the farm.

Soil tests are the best source of information about crop nutrient requirements. Soils contain a wide range of available nutrient levels, and different crops have very different nutrient requirements. The expected yield of the crop also will affect the amount of nutrient required. For example, a corn crop requires a large amount of nitrogen and a smaller amount of phosphate and potash. An alfalfa crop, however, requires no nitrogen, some phosphate, and a large amount of potash.

In general, forage crops such as hay or corn silage will use more nutrients than grain crops. A rotation of grain and forage crops will require nutrients very different from those needed by either of the individual crops grown in a field in a given year. These facts become very important when manure is used to meet crop nutrient needs.

IV. Prioritize the farm fields on the basis of their suitability for manure application.

Using soil tests, the fields' cropping and manure application history, the planned crop rotation, and other characteristics such as field location, slope, and soil characteristics, rank the fields for manure applications from highest to lowest. Some of the factors involved in this ranking are illustrated in Table 1.

Table 1. Factors involved in field prioritization for manure applications.

Nutrient Considerations

Nutrient	Prioritization for Manure
	High	Low

N requirement	highest N requirement	lowest N requirement

 - The Personal Touch of Family Ownership
- Responsive Service and Support Throughout the Season
 - Superior Genetics From Superior Sources
 - On-Staff Dairy Nutrition Consultant
 - Higher Yields
 - Digestibility Testing
- "Agronomy Up Front™" - production information

Together, it all adds up to a solid relationship that gives you a higher return on your investment.

AgriCulver is your exclusive supplier of:

The only independent national seed brand that supplies Agronomy UpFront™ information and has unbiased access to cutting edge technologies you need. Golden Harvest is the 4th largest national brand with proven top performance in university and private trials. Digestibility testing also proven Golden Harvest's superior silage performance.

Advanta is a world leader in forage grass breeding, development and distribution. Many Advanta varieties are blending into MULTI-GRAZER mixers that are formulated specifically to meet grazing needs. Advanta varieties such as Orion & Pizor orchardgrass, Siene & Fuego Tall Fescue and Aubisque Perennial Ryegrass demonstrate top performance in university trials.

HayGrazer ALFALFA

Great Plains Research Company hit a home-run when they released HayGrazer. HayGrazer has demonstrated superior performance over and over across the Northeast with its aggressive branching root system, deep-set, protected crowns, extra-leafy, fine stems, winter hardiness, weevil resistance and leaf hopper tolerance. HayGrazer produces higher yields of high quality hay.

DAIRY BANQUET®

AgriCulver brought you the pea/triticale mix that changed the standards. Now the name represents the brand of forages that you know are superior. The name will only appear on "top-of-the-line" seed varieties and mixtures that are updated and replaced when better varieties become available. Dairy Banquet™ Fall Blend produces high quality forage in the fall and the next spring.

AgriCulver is your superior forage seed supplier for today and beyond.

V. Determine the appropriate manure application rate and allocate the available manure to the fields in the established priority order.

The rate calculations are based on the nutrient of principal concern (usually N or P). If the rate is based on N, the manure analysis must be adjusted for N availability and the crop requirement must be adjusted for residual N from previous manure applications and legume crops.

The best approach to determining an environmentally sound manure application rate is to use the rate that does not apply any nutrient in excess of the soil test's recommendations. In our experience, P is usually the limiting nutrient when this approach is followed.

For fields where there is a crop rotation, based the calculations for this limit on the nutrient needs of the entire rotation rather than on the current crop only. In Pennsylvania, we typically base the manure application rate on N and try to minimize excess P and K applications based on the rotation requirements. In practice, many farmers still apply excess P and K. Since the major loss pathways for P and K are field runoff and erosion, good soil conservation practices are critical in minimizing the environment effect of excess P and K applications in manure.

For more information about making application rate calculations, see Penn State's Agronomy Facts #55, Estimating Manure Application Rates.

VI. Adjust the calculated manure rates for practicality.

This usually results in the grouping of the fields into one or a few standard manure application rates that the farmer is able and willing to apply. Using these standard rates, the available manure is allocated to the fields in priority order until all of the manure is allocated or all of the fields have been fertilized. If manure remains, a plan is developed to remove it from the farm, or the cropping program is adjusted to use up small excess amounts.

VII. Finally, compare the nutrients supplied in the manure to the needs of the crop to determine if additional nutrients are required or if a serious excess of any nutrient is being applied.

Deficiencies can be handled by applying supplemental fertilizer nutrients or manure from other sources. Serious excesses must be evaluated in light of the nutrient needs of the crop rotation and the potential impact area of the nutrient loss, and may require a change in the manure application plan.

Implementation Of The Nutrient Management Plan

- Manure always should be spread on fields uniformly and at the planned rates.

- Manure spreader calibration is the key for implementing the nutrient management plan. Procedures for calibrating different types of manure spreaders are available.

- Crop nutrient uptake is most efficient if manure is spread as close as possible to the time when plants will use the nutrients. The longer the manure is in the soil before the crops take up the nutrients, the more susceptible those nutrients will be to loss.

- The season in which manure is applied will affect the nutrient availability for crops. The best time is usually in the spring, just before the crop will use the nutrients. Summer also is good if application to growing crops is possible. Fall and winter are the riskiest times to spread because there is little crop growth to use the nutrients until the following growing season. A higher potential for nutrient loss also exists during these seasons because of frozen soils and high precipitation. If manure must be applied in the fall and winter, the use of a cover crop is highly recommended.

- Incorporation of manure into the soil as soon as possible after it is spread results in the greatest nutrient availability to crops and reduces nutrient losses, pollution, and odor.

One-half inch of soaking rainfall without significant runoff is comparable to incorporation of surface-applied manure.

- Surface-applied manure may be lost through surface runoff. On soils with a high erosion potential, conservation practices such as strip cropping, contour farming, crop residue management, cover crops, cropland terraces, diversions and grassed waterways can effectively reduce the loss of soil and manure nutrients.

- Be especially careful with manure management in environmentally sensitive areas such as near streams, water bodies, or sinkholes; in areas where the potential for concentrated water flow exists, particularly in the winter; and near wells and springs. Nutrient application buffer zones may be needed near these sensitive areas.

- Since the amount of manure N that becomes available in any given year is very difficult to predict, the Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test (PSNT) or early-season chlorophyll meter test are useful tools that can help determine if the manure N is adequate to meet the needs of a corn crop. For more information about this test, see Penn State's Agronomy Facts #17, Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test for Corn, or #53, The Early-Season Chlorophyll Meter Test for Corn.

- Manure spreaders have been implicated as a major cause of soil compaction on many farms. Avoid compaction by staying off wet soils with heavy equipment.
- Keep good records of manure application. This will not only document your good management, but also provide valuable information you can use to make future plan adjustments.

For More Information, Consult PDA's New Best Management Practices Manual

Trends clearly indicate that the number and acreage of Pennsylvania farms will continue to decline, while the number of animals per farm will continue to increase. As the animal production industry evolves to fewer farms with more animals on less acres, and as citizens continue to move to rural areas, the potential for conflicts with neighboring land uses increases.

These conflicts have required the livestock and poultry industries to carefully review farm siting and farm management practices in order to better coexist with neighbors.

This article includes information from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Nutrient Management Manual, outlines Best Management Practices (BMPs), which can assist livestock and poultry operations in their efforts to protect local and regional natural resources, and to allow them to successfully integrate into the neighboring community.

Some of the BMPs described are mandatory practices to meet regulatory requirements. In addition to these required practices, the article also describes a number of suggested BMPs to assist producers in their efforts to voluntarily address site specific concerns.

Best Management Practices Manuals Available

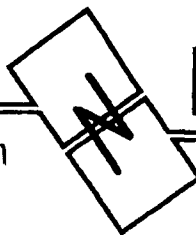

Regardless of the size of the operation, all persons managing animal facilities are required to follow the guidelines in the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection Manure Management Manual. Those operators choosing not to follow the practices outline in the Manure Management Manual are required to obtain a permit or approval by the DEP for their alternative actions.

Several major agricultural best management practices manuals have been in use for years. These include the Pennsylvania Technical Guide, the Pennsylvania Conservation Catalog, the Pennsylvania Manure Management Manual, the Penn State Agronomy Guide, the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Program Technical Manual, and manuals developed by livestock and poultry producer groups such as the National Pork Producers Council, the Pennsylvania Dairy Network Partnership, and the Poultry Water Quality Consortium.

This listing includes the more widely used reference manuals currently available to agricultural producers. This is not an inclusive list. There are additional reference manuals available to assist agricultural operators. These above manuals focus primarily on BMPs to conserve soil and protect water quality. You can generally locate these and other reference materials through your county conservation district office.

BMP Cost An Issue

As producers are selecting BMPs to address various concerns, the cost of these practices are a major consideration. A farm enterprise can only stay viable as long as the decisions made by the farmer are economically practical. Therefore, in order for a BMP to be a realistic option for a farmer, it must prove to be both environmentally sound and economically feasible for the given situation.

The remainder of this article will feature information on Best Management Practices that deal with the siting of the livestock and poultry operations and with water quality issues.

Siting Livestock and Poultry Operations The proper siting of livestock and poultry operations is key to assuring operation viability and smooth integration into the existing community.

Proper siting needs to take into consideration all of the planning and operational issues associated with these facilities such as water quality, air quality, and odor concerns, along with transportation and accessibility to alternative manure markets.

Local zoning requirements: The authority for determining the siting of particular land uses in Pennsylvania lies within the local government. This authority resides locally so that residents can, through community planning efforts, determine appropriate locations for the various land uses that need to be accommodated in the area.

Operators proposing to build facilities should check with the local municipality to determine if they have zoning or other land use ordinances that direct where animal production facilities may or may not be sited.

Local zoning requirements are developed recognizing that they need to provide designated areas to accommodate all types of land uses, including agriculture. These zoning requirements often designate appropriate areas for agricultural operations.

Site Specific Considerations

When selecting an appropriate site for a new animal production facility, the operator should consider two broad categories of concerns. First is the appropriateness of the site itself in relation to the construction and operation of the facility. Second is the potential effect that the proposed operation could have on the neighboring community and the region.

Several of the key issues that need to be considered when determining the appropriateness of a particular site for agricultural development are listed below.

Distances from residences, businesses, churches, schools, and recreational areas Large animal production facilities should be located away from nonagricultural land uses where possible. Check the zoning requirements of the local municipality. Strong agricultural zoning can help assure that the facility will not be a conflicting land use with current and future neighbors.

Prevailing wind Determine the prevailing wind direction to help in identifying which, if any, neighboring areas are likely to be affected by the production facility. The most critical wind direction is that observed during warm weather when the neighbors are participating in summer activities. Most landowners know the prevailing wind directions during the summer months.

Topography Odor plumes traveling across flat terrain will undergo less turbulence and dilution compared to that of hilly countryside. The topography also determines the path of the odors during thermal inversion.

Obstructions in the path of exhausted air Shrubs, bushes, and trees near exhaust fans provide limited odor dissipation. Groves of trees near fans provide moderate odor reduction. Wooded areas (through which other buildings can't be seen) offer increased odor reduction. Vegetation buffers that include conifers help insure continuous foliage and odor suppression throughout the year.

Visibility of the operation Screening animal production facilities with vegetative buffers or through the use of site topography can help increase the acceptance of the facility by the community.

Special protection waters Operators of proposed facilities should contact their regional DEP office to determine if the site is in an existing or proposed special protection watershed. CAFOs located in special protection watersheds must obtain individual NPDES permits. Water resources The site should have water resources adequate to accommodate the operation. The site must also be designed, constructed, and operated to protect existing water resources. Water resource issues to consider are: water availability, depth to water table, distance of operation facilities from streams and water bodies, topography and hydrology, wetland existence, watershed characteristics.

Soils suitability The soils at the proposed site should be adequate to produce the crops planned for the operation, to accept the portion of the manure planned to be applied at the site, and to accommodate the proposed buildings and manure storage.

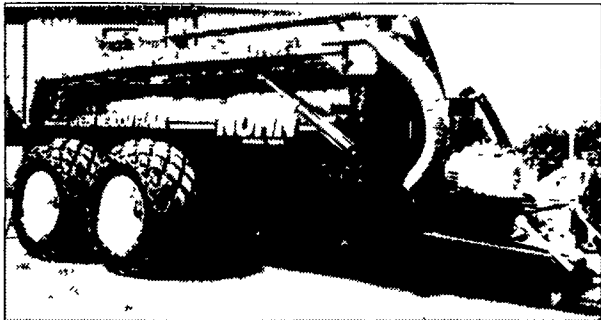

Local and regional transportation infrastructure The availability and quality of existing roads that can service the site will influence the cost of the facility as well as the ease of access to the site. Well-maintained roads are important for transportation of feed, animals, and manure.

Areas for manure application Many CAOs and other large operations will export manure to other farmers, which is beneficial for both parties. For those operators planning to export manure, the area selected for developing a facility should have adequate farmland nearby that is able to receive manure.

Communicating with affected neighbors It is essential to have good communications with any affected parties neighboring the facility. Based on the evaluation of the site characteristics, those local residents most likely to be affected by the facility should be identified and contacted.

Agricultural security area Establishing an agricultural security area to include the operation will provide the operator with a level of assurance that area residents accept and understand the land use established for this location.

Community dispute resolution The PDA has established a model that can be used by local communities to address disputes related to the siting of animal production facilities.

Water Quality

The Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act (1993) was enacted to address water quality concerns related to CAOs through implementation of an environmentally and economically sound nutrient management plan. Several other regulatory requirements have been established to ensure that Pennsylvania's water resources are protected for current and future generations. Any of these laws may apply to any individual production facility in Pennsylvania. These laws were written and are being enforced so that they complement one another. The following highlights the various water quality concerns that animal production operations need to consider as they plan and implement their operations.

Field application of nutrients Crops require nutrients for growth. Over application and inappropriate applications of nutrients may result in nutrient losses to the environment. This increases the risk of surface and ground water pollution and the farmer's liability for damages.

Nutrient losses Cropping systems are not 100 percent efficient and nutrient losses are unavoidable. The variability of environmental factors, such as weather, adds to the uncertainty. The implementation of appropriate site-specific BMPs can help reduce this uncertainty.

Nitrogen Nitrogen can be lost to the environment in a number of ways. It can volatilize or denitrify into the atmosphere, it can leach through the soil and be lost into groundwater sources, and it can be carried away in a dissolved or undissolved form by runoff water. Phosphorus Phosphorus is more stable than nitrogen and easily bonds to soil particles. However, there are two critical pathways that can deliver phosphorus from the soil to waterways. The most common transport mechanism is phosphorus attached to sediment particles. Another transport method that needs additional evaluation is the delivery of dissolved phosphorus in runoff water.

Manure handling and storage Animal production operations often need to store manure at the facility until it is time to apply to fields or export. All manure should be handled and stored properly to prevent water pollution. Where possible, siting and management practices should divert clean water from contact with animal manure or manure storage systems.

Setback considerations Setback distances to surface water bodies, sinkholes, public water supplies, and private water supplies are important factors to consider when locating operations and associated support facilities. The Nutrient Management Act has established required setbacks to prevent the transport of nitrogen and other manure nutrients,

SE8

The Rhino® SE8 is an economical rotary mower designed to help maintain larger acreages of grass, weeds, stalks, or material up to 1" in diameter.

The streamlined, close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 and 45 horsepower on the SE10. The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts. Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4" blade overlap provide a clean cut.

via overland flow, to water wells and surface water bodies.

Areas sensitive to water contamination In addition to required setbacks, special consideration needs to be given when applying or storing manure in areas of limestone, areas with high water tables, and areas near private and public water supply. The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection has identified "Special Protection" waters and "Impaired Watersheds" because of their water quality characteristics. Contact your local conservation district for a list of these water areas.

Water Quality Requirements To Comply With State Programs

The following requirements and BMPs are specifically mandated for various agricultural production operations to comply with state and federal water quality regulatory programs. Several of the requirements and practices listed below represent management systems.

For these management systems, several site-specific component BMPs may be used together to meet the BMP system requirements. These component BMPs are selected to best address the site-specific conditions related to the operation.

Follow the guidelines in the Pennsylvania Manure Management Manure This manual outlines practices to reduce the risk of water pollution. The guidelines provided in this manual rely on additional resource documents and consultants to assist the farmer in determining site specific BMPs available to meet the guidelines.

Develop and utilize an approved Nutrient Management Plan A sample plan is included in this reference guide. Your local conservation district can identify nutrient management plan consultants who can help you develop a plan.

Develop an erosion and runoff control plan Whether it's for cropped fields or a construction plan, an erosion and runoff control plan is required. A farm's conservation plan does include an erosion and sedimentation control plan to address plowing and tilling activities on an operation. An approved nutrient management plan also includes runoff controls. Construction activities involving earth moving also require an erosion and sedimentation control plan. Local conservation districts can help with this plan. Other permits necessary to comply with state programs for construction activities include: DEP's NPDES Stormwater Permit, CAFO Permit, Discharge Permit, and Water Quality Part II Permit.

This is just a small portion of the information available in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's new Nutrient Management Best Management Practices manual. For more information on receiving a manual, contact your local conservation district or the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

York County Conservation District Ensures Implementation Of Nutrient Management Plans

Shelly Ogline
Nutrient Management Specialist
York County Conservation District

When the Nutrient Management Act regulations took effect in 1997, the York County Conservation District signed a delegation agreement with the State Conservation Commission to administer the Nutrient Management Program within York County.

Administering the program includes:

- ✓ Providing education about the Act;
- ✓ Encouraging voluntary and mandatory participation of agricultural operations;
- ✓ Assisting farm operators and Nutrient Management Specialists with understanding and following the regulations;
- ✓ Reviewing and approving nutrient management plans written by certified specialists; and
- ✓ Providing quarterly reports of actions taken to assist, approve, and enforce the Act.

After the regulations took effect, conservation districts focused on educating the farming and non-farming community about who was affected by the Act, and what needed to be done to comply.

York County is pleased to report that currently over 95% of its known CAO's have an approved nutrient management plan. Now the educational focus and follow-up from conservation districts focuses on ensuring that CAO's and voluntary operations are properly implementing their nutrient plans.

An operation does not receive the limited liability protection provided by the Nutrient Management Act unless the plan is fully implemented. That means that all required best management practices (BMP's) to address critical areas of erosion or water quality concerns must be installed. It also means that required record-keeping is up to date and accurate. A CAO has three years from approval to fully implement the plan. Any management or non-structural issues should be implemented as soon as possible. BMPs that need to be constructed must be completed within three years.

Delegated conservation districts are required to do random status reviews on 5% or a minimum of three CAO operations per year. The reviewers evaluate if the plan is consistent with the operation, assess plan implementation and practice maintenance. This is a responsibility that Districts take seriously.

Conservation districts will perform on-site status reviews of all operations thought to be out of compliance based on

Dairy Farmer Sees Nutrient Management As Proactive Solution

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

NOTTINGHAM (Chester County) — Nutrient management has always been a part of the Masons' dairy operation in Nottingham.

So, when a local consulting company approached them about developing a comprehensive nutrient management plan, brothers Steve and Alan, along with their father Robert, jumped at the chance.

"We were already accounting for our manure through our yearly crop reports," said Steve. "But we knew we were approaching the size where we would need a comprehensive written plan."

The plan was written a couple of years ago and outlines how the Masons utilize the manure from their 350 milking cows, along with heifer replacements, on their 400 acres of owned acreage.

"We didn't have to make a lot of changes in the way we were doing things," he said. "It just made us legal."

It's The Law

"What farmers have to realize is that nutrient management is the law, and it's better to be proactive than reactive," said Steve. "The law isn't asking us to do anything irrational."

According to Steve, as farmers get bigger and chase economic efficiency, they can quickly lose sight of the environment and water quality. "It's important we don't take those things for granted."

Farm To Use Nutrients

The Masons farm in Chester County, which is a prime area for development, located within an hour from both Baltimore and Philadelphia. In addition to their 400 acres of owned land, they farm an additional 300 acres of rented ground. But their plan was written to accommodate their herd size using only the owned property.

"In this area, you're always waiting for the other shoe to fall," said Steve. "You never know from one year to the next how many acres you may lose to development."

To maximize the amount of nutrients they can apply to their ground, the Masons plant all forages on the 400 acres. The 300 acres of rented land are planted in grain corn sold as a cash crop and soybeans, which are roasted and fed in the ration.

"You can purchase concentrates anywhere, but you have to find creative solutions to grow forages," said Steve. "Besides, forages use draw more nutrients from the land base than concentrates."

The Masons have stopped growing alfalfa because it freed up more acres for manure application.

Double Cropping Helps

The forages that the Masons grow are corn silage, wheat, and soybeans. They're experimenting with a new variety of forage soybeans from the USDA.

"This will be the guinea pig year for the new rotation," said Steve. "After this year, we'll know how well the forage soybeans work and whether or not we have our acreage balanced."

Steve Mason, along with his brother Alan and father Robert, utilize a comprehensive nutrient management plan on their 350-cow dairy.

Corn silage is planted to be harvested in the fall. Then the wheat is planted after applying manure to the ground. Once the wheat is harvested in the spring, the Masons apply more manure to the ground. Then they plant the forage soybeans.

"After the beans come off in August, we have another opportunity to apply manure," said Steve. Currently the Masons have about 180 to 200 acres of corn silage and 125 acres that they rotate in forage soybeans and forage wheat.

Depend On Consultants

Steve admits to not having much to do with writing his nutrient management plan. "I just gave my consultant the numbers, and he developed the plan."

He depends on his crop advisor and other consultants to keep him abreast of what pesticide and fertilizer needs he has and where his manure should be applied.

"You have to determine what you want to handle and what you don't," said Steve. "That's why there are consultants."

Along with writing the plan and helping him manage his nutrients, consultants help Steve stay in compliance with regulations.

"I look at consultants the way I do our employees," said Steve. "I seek quality consultants. They have to have the knowledge in the field, trust in what they're doing, and treat me like I am the only one they're working with. They need to give me the time I need."

number of required reviews. Review sites are prioritized to cover operations thought to be out of compliance, those in special protection watersheds, and operations that District staff does not have regular contact with throughout the year.

There is a standard checklist of items that will be checked during the review. The staff from York County sends a letter to the operation about 2 weeks in advance letting them know they have been selected for a status review. The letter includes a copy of the checklist that will be covered. The operator will be required to provide records of crop yields, manure application details, exported manure details and any other required items. The reviewer also checks to see that the installation schedule for BMP's is being followed.

If a status review of an operation finds incomplete records, if BMP's have not been installed as required, or the plan is no longer consistent with the operation, the operation will be given an agreed upon amount of time to comply. Follow-up efforts will be made by the Conservation District to assist the operator in any reasonable way.

If the operator seems unwilling to work with the Conservation District or satisfactory compliance progress is not made, the York Conservation District has agreed to submit the name to the State Conservation Commission staff. The State Conservation Commission (SCC) has ultimate enforcement of the Nutrient Act.

SCC staff will respond to the names turned in by Conservation Districts or PA Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for Clean Streams Law violations. The first step by the SCC is to issue a Notice of Violation. This will establish time frames for the operation to follow in order to have one final chance to comply with the Nutrient Management Act.

If the SCC also does not receive cooperation from the operation, they can seek a court injunction against the operation and/or assess civil penalties. Enforcement action is determined on a case-by-case basis depending on severity of the violation and level of cooperation from the violator.

According to Section 12 of the Nutrient Act, entitled "Civil Penalties and Remedies," penalties of $500 for the first day of violation and $100 for each subsequent day can be assessed until action is taken to comply with the Nutrient Management Act.

The State Conservation Commission has used enforcement action in three separate cases in Lycoming, Juniata and Dauphin Counties. In all three situations, the operations had approved nutrient management plans, but were not following or properly implementing the plan.

The Nutrient Management Act is here to stay. The York County Conservation District and 59 fellow Districts across the state have agreed to administer the Act. Our job includes ensuring that operations are complying with the Act. This is a job that we take seriously.

For more information about the Nutrient Management Act or complying with your current approved Nutrient Management Plan in York County, contact Shelly Ogline at 717-755-2966, extension 107. For all other requests, contact your local Conservation District or the State Conservation Commission staff.

Getting Handle On Manure, Looking At N Tests, Help Swine Grower Manage Nutrients

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — Before the “big snow,” Bob Hess recalls a regular plan, even during some mild winters, of emptying the hog manure pit and spreading the nutrients on the ground.

It was all done to “get a good handle on the manure level in the pit,” Hess said.

But along came the “Blizzard of ’93,” which brought one to three feet of snow in mid-March 1993 to areas of the Northeast.

And Hess was stuck, unable to drain the pit. This caused some real problems.

“The pit got full,” said Hess. “I vowed to never let it to get that full again.”

So in 1994, Hess purchased a 5,000-gallon manure storage tank on a truck, allowing him to apply manure where and when it was needed.

But to get a handle on compaction, he switched to a pull-type tank.

Hess worked closely with the Lancaster County Conservation District to improve soil and water retention through a system of field contours at the farm. This was 1997 — the same year he worked with a local commercial crops consulting firm to develop a nutrient management plan.

Hess raises about 5,200 hogs under contract for Hershey Ag. Using the truck has proved beneficial, and Hess can finally get a handle on swine manure.

Hess operates a wean-to-finish farm on an all-in, all-out basis. The hogs are weaned at 12 pounds and are finished at the Marietta-based farm at 250-270 pounds each.

Hess, who obtains hogs selected by Hershey, are fed with autofeeding system. They get the feed in the amounts they want, when they want it.

The whole barn is totally concrete slatted, with a six-foot deep pit underneath the slats.

Because air quality is very important for the pigs, fans pull gasses out of the pit and also help to reduce odors in the barn.

Hess never agitates the pits, so adding bacteria is a “must,” he noted, and is a big part of odor reduction. This keeps manure consistent, so it can be pumped and spread.

Hess farms about 350 acres, included rented ground. About 8,000 gallons of swine slurry are applied to corn ground, about 5,000 gallons to the soybeans, and about 3,000- 5,000 gallons per acre to wheat. The barley gets no swine manure.

Steer manure is applied to ground where corn was chopped for silage. Rye is no-tilled at a one bushel per acre rate for a cover crop.

Hess has tested the manure for nitrogen values. It tests at 5.9 percent N (59 units per 1,000).

He soil tests every year. All nutrient applications are made to test recommendations.

Hess manages 160 acres of corn, 140 acres of soybeans, 40 acres of wheat, and 10 acres of barley.

At one time Hess, in partnership with his cousin Joe Hess, produced tomatoes, but abandoned the project because of an insufficient water supply for irrigation. Though at one time Hess managed about 60 acres in tomatoes, he never stopped considering ways to diversify.

Marietta swine farmer Bob Hess noted that with the purchase of a tank spreader, he can get a better handle on pit manure and soil compaction. Photo by Andy Andrews

He has expanded his farm operation to include steers. Hess finishes 150- 170 head of lightweight feeder cattle for cousin Dwight Hess, also of Marietta.

With the depressed market price outlook for grain, Hess built a feed room with a TMR mixer and updated the barn on his parents’ farm, Andrew and Dorothy Hess. Bob noted that feeding corn to cattle was better than simply cash-cropping the grain.

Proactive Solution

According to Steve, it’s the farmer’s responsibility to manage their manure and avoid violations. With nitrogen-based planning, Steve believes that animal agriculture took a proactive approach to the problem.

“It doesn’t matter how many people are to blame,” said Steve. “If you’re part of the problem, you need to take your share of the blame and not point the finger. Animal agriculture did that with nitrogen-based planning.”

Steve hopes that the industry will do the same with phosphorus-based planning.

“Right now, on a nitrogen-based plan, we can utilize four times as much manure on our ground than I am told we could on a phosphorus-based plan.”

In Steve’s opinion, different feeding strategies and cropping patterns could be the solution to managing phosphorus.

“Most dairy farmers have the goal to increase cow numbers, and as we increase cow numbers, we have to make sure we’re in compliance,” said Steve. “A phosphorus-based plan could make it very difficult.”

“I just hope the industry comes up with a proactive solution before we have to be reactive.”

Marketing Surplus Manure

Leon Russler

Penn State Cooperative Extension

A key part of the nutrient management plan for operations with surplus manure nutrients is determining how to utilize the excess manure. Marketing surplus manure to other agricultural operations that need crop nutrients is one way farmers can solve their surplus manure situation.

In order to promote redistribution of surplus manure nutrients Penn State Cooperative Extension has developed a manure marketing program. This effort is focused in southeastern Pennsylvania which is noted for intense poultry and livestock operations on small farms.

To participate in the extension manure marketing program, farmers complete a survey form indicating whether they were potential suppliers or potential receivers. Over the years that the program has been in place almost three times as many farmers have signed up to receive manure as to supply it. This indicates that a marketing opportunity exists for those with excess manure nutrients.

In a 1993 survey farmers on the lists reported supplying or receiving 19,040 tons of manure annually. Three Lancaster County firms are currently marketing around 55,000 tons of poultry manure per year, most of it out of the county.

Numerous other livestock producers are marketing their manure surplus directly without the assistance of outside commercial firms. Some is trucked as far as 350 miles and still sold at a profit. Custom application of layer manure to buyers' fields is a growing service that is increasing market opportunities.

In 1998 the participants on the list were surveyed as well. 70 percent of the suppliers who returned the survey cards reported using the list to make a contact or they were contacted by others on the list. 60 percent reported using the list for multiple contacts. 60 percent reported the contacts lead to making a deal.

The suppliers reported marketing 22,885 tons of manure per year. Among the receivers who returned the survey cards, 85 percent reported two or more contacts using the list. 57 percent reported the contacts led to making a deal.

If you would like to participate in the manure marketing program either as a supplier or receiver, contact Leon Russler, Penn State Cooperative Extension, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster PA 17601-3184, Phone (717)-394-6851.

The Nutrient Management Law's Impact On Mifflin County Farmers

Mike Stuck

*Nutrient Management Specialist
Mifflin County Conservation District*

Since the Nutrient Management Law was enacted in October of 1997, approximately 20 Mifflin County farmers have had nutrient management plans developed.

15 farms have been completed to meet Act 6 regulations, while five have been developed voluntarily. Although these numbers are not very high, it does not mean that Mifflin County has not felt the affects of the law.

The majority of farms in the county are dairy operations. At this point we have only one dairy operation that is considered a concentrated animal operation (CAO) and has an approved nutrient management plan. However, several of the CAO's in the county are dairy farmers that decided to sell the cows and try either poultry houses or swine units of some type. If this becomes a trend, our activity concerning Act 6 will greatly increase.

Even though we have a relatively low number of CAO's in the county, public awareness concerning Act 6 seems to be very high. For example, when citizens heard of a rather large sow operation that was being proposed in their township, a "concerned citizen's group" was formed and actions were set in motion to get the construction of the operation stopped.

Public meetings were held, the issuance of building permits delayed, and even an environmental ordinance was enacted. To date, construction of this large sow operation has never started.

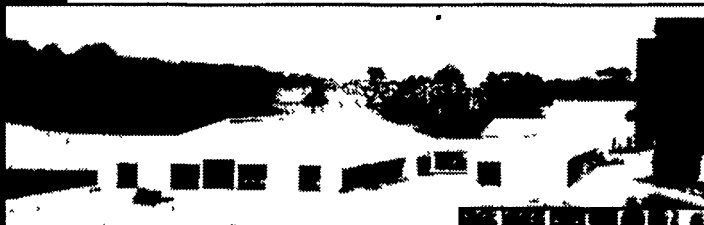

In other areas of the county where large confinement buildings have already been constructed, different issues have been raised. Emptying of the large manure storage structures that usually accompany these facilities has created some public backlash.

The conservation district normally receives a handful of complaints in the spring and in the fall regarding the spreading of manure. After odor, which there is no control over, spreading proximity to streams and property lines are usually of greatest concern. Prior to Act 6, we rarely received a complaint related to manure spreading.

However, even with all the news articles, newsletters, training seminars, and workshops that have been made available, there are still people that have not heard of the nutrient management law.

Education and outreach is still a very important tool for the various agricultural agencies to use in helping everyone understand just what the nutrient management law is all about.

In conclusion, Act 6 not only impacts farmers, but everyone closely related to the agricultural community. Farmers have learned that if their animal numbers or crop acreage changes drastically, they should contact the conservation district to help determine if their farm is now considered a concentrated animal operation and subject to Act 6 regulations.

The general public has learned of the regulations and knows that there are certain setbacks and spreading regulations that pertain to concentrated animal operations. Hopefully, both sides can work together to create a positive outcome.

Communicating with affected neighbors

It is essential to have good communications with any affected parties neighboring the facility. Based on the evaluation of the site characteristics, those local residents most likely to be affected by the facility should be identified and contacted.

This can be done on a one-on-one basis, or through a group meeting to describe the possible project and to discuss any concerns. In this way, the operator can gauge public acceptance of the proposed operation.

Agricultural security areas

Establishing an Agricultural Security Area to include the operation will provide the operator with a level of assurance that area residents accept and understand the landuse established for this location. Producers should contact their county planning office to obtain information related to forming an Agriculture Security Area.

Community dispute resolution

The PDA has established a model that can be used by local communities to address disputes related to the siting of animal production facilities. A copy of this model for community dispute resolution can be obtained by contacting the state office in Harrisburg.

Why is Scavenger the Best?

One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern. This flighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading. The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller. This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure.

The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers). This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or power down through heavy loads.

Outstanding Application Control.

Gehl's proven Variflo™ discharge system has been made even better. It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened. New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothly and evenly. You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing. With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips.

Nutrient Management In Bedford County

Tammy Hockenberry
Nutrient Management Specialist
Bedford County Conservation District

Nutrient management in Bedford County means different things to different people. To the public, it means factory hog farms taking over the county. To most farmers, however, it means complying to government regulations.

Bedford County is located in the southcentral part of Pennsylvania. It is essentially a very rural county, covering 652,040 acres, or about 1,018 square miles. Most of these acres are forested land with a small percentage in residential or commercial land and 213,500 acres in farmland.

Although people may get the impression that hog farms cover Bedford County, dairying is the main farm enterprise in the county. As of 1998, the county had about 18,900 milk cows.

The number of dairy farms in the county is about 255 compared to 75 hog farms. A farm needs to have at least 10 dairy cows to be classified as a commercial dairy and only one hog to be listed as a hog farm, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

What is the definition of a factory hog farm? An operation that concentrates many animals into one or a few buildings, usually on a small amount of land that is not enough acreage to absorb the large quantities of manure produced by the facility. The result is a need to store the manure until it is exported to surrounding lands for application.

Bedford County has very few corporate hog farms located here. Since Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act was passed in 1997, farmers or operators had until October 1, 1998, to submit a nutrient management plan to their local conservation district for approval.

So far Bedford County has received six nutrient management plans from concentrated animal operations that fall under Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act guidelines. Of those six plans, two are for proposed hog operations on which construction never began. One operator changed his mind about constructing a hog facility, while the other is tied up in litigation with a group of concerned citizens. Two more of those six are for small (1,000 hogs) finishing operations.

Bedford County also has several operations that have voluntarily completed nutrient management plans. All of these are dairy operations, except for one, which is a combination dairy and hog operation. At the conservation district, we are expecting the requests for volunteer plans to increase by the end of this year. More funding is expected to come from Harrisburg in late 2000 for best management practices through special grant programs, such as Growing Greener, COOL, and the Nutrient Management Act grant program.

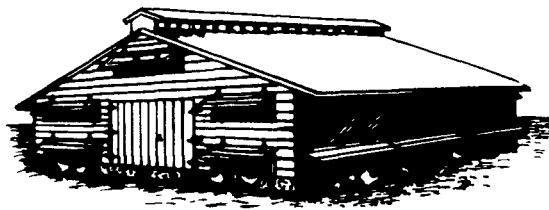

While the fine details of these grants haven't been worked out yet, the one theme that prevails is that farms must have nutrient management plans approved by the conservation district in order to receive any monies. This applies to even to those farms that aren't CAOs.

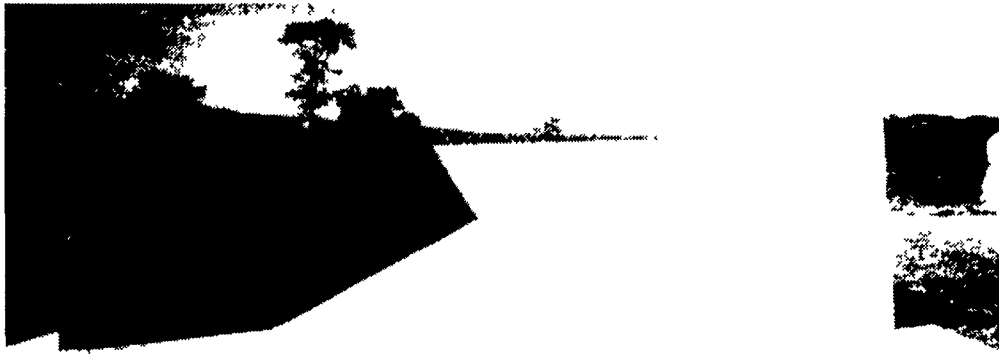

This is especially good news for counties that aren't in the Chesapeake Bay watershed because funding for best management practices in these areas of the state are hard to come by.

Bedford County has a Chesapeake Bay program, and since its inception, more than a million dollars in cost share projects have been completed. Bedford County ranks second only to Lancaster County for Chesapeake Bay monies spent.

Best management practices installed include agricultural waste storage, diversions, heavy use protection areas, roof runoff management, waste transfer systems, stream crossings, grazing systems, spring developments, waterways, stacking areas, underground outlets, filter areas, and agriculture waste fencing.

A waiting list for project requests exists in Bedford County. These new grant monies will help us get to people who have been on the list for two to three years. If you know you have a nutrient management problem on your farm, contact your local conservation district about getting on a list for these funds.

Treating On-farm Manure

Peter Wright

Manure Management Specialist

Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department Cornell University

Will you be treating or processing the manure from your animals in the future? You may be. Here's why.

1) Society has recognized that animal agriculture can lead to excess nitrates in the ground water, pathogens in the drinking water and excess nutrients, BOD, and sediment in surface water.

2) To avoid these problems manure will increasingly be spread on dry soils in fields where the chance of runoff and leaching are low.

3) Manure storage will be standard procedure on most farms to avoid spreading manure on wet soils.

4) When manure is stored it starts to decompose anaerobically. The by-products of incomplete anaerobic decomposition are very smelly.

5) Society objects to bad odors as much if not more than dirty water. Treatment for odor control will become much more common on farms.

Here are other reasons to treat manure besides odor reduction:

✓ Reduction in mass. Less total material to haul to far away fields and less soil compaction.

✓ Nutrient reduction. Reduced amounts of nutrients would mean less land would be needed for disposal.

✓ Pathogen control. Eliminating animal and human pathogens from manure would improve biosecurity issues.

✓ By-product sales. Processes that produce feed, energy or salable organic matter could help pay for the treatment process or in some cases add an income stream.

There are a wide variety of farms. They vary in their resources and their manure management concerns. Some farms have access to more capital, skilled labor, management ability, nearby land resources, water resources, and markets than other farms.

Some farms are under more severe constraints to control odors, nutrients, or pathogens. Below are different manure treatment and handling methods that may match the resources and needs of different farms:

Separation of the manure solids mechanically can produce a "solid" portion (15-30% DM) and a "liquid portion" (4-8% DM). Liquids are easier to handle. Solids can be recovered for bedding, soil amendment, or exported off the farm.

Composting dryer manure directly, or by adding bedding or an amendment to wetter manure, a biologically decomposed product can be produced. An excellent way to treat dryer manure. Odor reduction is an important advantage of well managed composting. Equipment for solids handling is available on most farms. Material may be marketed.

Anaerobic Digestion takes manure and digests it completely producing an odorless effluent that has reduced solids content while retaining the nutrients. Methane gas is recovered that can be used for energy. Demand for the anaerobically digested solids is greater than raw solids.

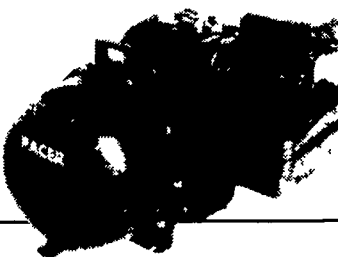

Lagoon Treatment of manure from the farms consists of diluting the manure, removing solids then treatment in a facultative lagoon to be recycled as flush water to dilute more manure.

Liquids and solids are periodically removed from the system. Odors are reduced and solids are separated. Works well with a flush system to remove manure from barns. Solids may be marketed. Liquids can be easily irrigated. Management is relatively easy.

Other potential treatment methods are biodrying, high solids anaerobic digestion, sequencing batch reactors, and total resource recovery. Manure Odors from Livestock Operations

Kenneth B. Kephart
Professor of Animal Science
Pennsylvania State University

Complaints of odors generated by livestock operations have intensified in recent years as facilities have increased in size. Many volatile organic and inorganic compounds released from livestock operations, particularly swine facilities, have objectionable odors. The amount and strength of the odor is influenced by:

1. The type of manure storage facilities.
2. How and when the manure is applied.
3. The presence of wet and dusty surfaces in the livestock facility.

The Process and Perception of Smell

Every odorant has a threshold concentration. Below this concentration, the odor compound can not be detected. The area of the brain that processes smell overlaps with the area that controls emotion. For this reason, unpleasant odors can affect mood, and may prompt unpleasant memories.

In an odor study last summer, we asked neighbors living near swine operations to evaluate odor intensity daily over a six-week period. As expected, neighbors closer to the swine units, and those living to the east and south reported higher odor scores than those living further away, and to the north and west. But odor scores were also affected by a number of personal factors.

For example, the following items tended to decrease odor scores recorded by neighbors:

- 1) If the neighbor knew the swine producer well.
- 2) If the farm was perceived as attractive.
- 3) If the neighbor's self-reported health status was high.
- 4) If the swine facility was not visible from the home or road.

Personal factors that had little or no impact on odor scores included: income, gender, age, education, whether the neighbor had been raised on a farm, length of time the neighbor had lived there, and the neighbor's reported knowledge of swine production.

Response to Odors

Research conducted by Susan Schiffman at Duke University shows that the mood of people living near swine facilities is negatively affected during the times they smell odors from the facility.

During our odor study last summer, we compared responses of neighbors of swine operations to those of rural residents not living near large livestock facilities. Both groups reported identical overall health scores. But neighbors indicated they experienced cough, nausea, fatigue, and throat irritation more often than did non-neighbors. There were no significant differences between the two groups in regard to frequency of headaches, muscular aches, chest tightness, depression or anxiety. These results are similar to those reported by Kelly Donham's laboratory at Iowa State University.

Manure Odors from Livestock Operations

Dispersion of Odors

An important aspect of odor dispersion is that the width of the odor plume changes very little as it moves from the source. Thus, wind blowing across a 1000-ft-wide field with freshly applied manure will potentially affect more people than wind blowing across a 300-ft wide manure application area.

During a sunny day, most of the odors are carried up with rising air currents. This is the primary reason that neighbors won't notice odors as often or as far away during days when the sky is clear.

During the night, the ground is cool so there are no rising air currents. In fact, when the air is very stable, temperatures are often inverted or upside down. This means that the temperature near the ground is lower than at higher altitudes. Under these conditions, the odor emissions from the building will stay near the ground and at high concentrations for long distances because there is little dilution.

Odor Control

To reduce odor emissions from buildings, producers should keep the inside of the facility as clean, dry, and dust free as possible. Undesirable conditions normally occur in facilities with poorly designed or malfunctioning ventilation systems.

Biofiltration of the exhausted air is showing promise for reducing odor emitted from swine facilities. Air from exhaust fans is pushed under and up through a layer of compost and wood chips.

Based on our personal observations and neighbors' odor scores from the research study last summer, the biofilters appear to be effective at removing odors. Our biofilter cost per 18-inch pit fan was about $400, but we are continuing to make design improvements which will probably add to the construction costs.

To reduce odor emissions from outside manure storages, many producers use pit additives, although these products have met with limited success. Covering manure containments with floating biocovers is an old technology that is gaining new popularity. We also included this technique in our odor study last summer and found that an 8-inch layer of floating straw effectively reduces odor, but without some type of support, it will probably not float for an entire summer. Our cost was about $.08/sq ft of manure storage.

To reduce odor at the time of manure application, the manure must be pretreated, injected, or incorporated immediately. Pre-treatment processes such as digestion, composting, or blending with dry materials can effectively reduce odor, but these practices are too costly for most producers. Injecting or incorporating manure whenever possible is recommended because it helps reduce ammonia and odor emissions. Many producers are reluctant to adopt these practices because incorporation interrupts conservation efforts and it damages forage crops.

Safety Issues and Manure Handling

Robert E. Graves

*Professor of Agricultural and Biological Engineering
The Pennsylvania State University*

In addition to protecting the environment, a complete nutrient management plan must consider the health and safety of workers and visitors. Manure systems present various hazards, including asphyxiation (inability to breathe), poisoning, drowning, electric shock, and machinery entanglement or entrapment.

Hazardous Gases

Liquid manure storages, pump pits, sumps, and tanks can easily contain poisonous gases that will not be apparent until someone enters the tank and is overcome. Multiple deaths have occurred as a result of people failing to follow appropriate procedures for working in these confined spaces. Do not enter manure sumps, pits, or storage tanks without appropriate safety apparatus and procedures. No tool, pump part, or farm chore is worth a human life.

Concentrations of toxic gases above critical levels will kill or immobilize you regardless of the presence of oxygen. Other gases kill by displacing the oxygen from the air space above the manure. The following gases may be found in liquid manure storages, pump pits, sumps or other confined spaces that contain or have contained manure:

Hydrogen sulfide is the most dangerous manure gas. It is colorless, heavier than air, and at high concentrations can cause death within seconds. The familiar "rotten egg smell" is detectable at low levels but at higher levels will quickly deaden the sense of smell.

You may not even realize hydrogen sulfide is present and then it's too late. Release of hydrogen sulfide can increase a thousand fold during agitation. Hydrogen sulfide easily accumulates in an enclosed manure tank, pump sump or enclosed building and is a deadly gas.

Carbon dioxide is a colorless and odorless nontoxic gas that is heavier than air. It replaces oxygen and causes death by asphyxiation. Carbon dioxide can only be detected by gas detection equipment.

Ammonia is lighter than air and has a strong bleach smell. Because it is an irritant, people usually leave the area quickly. It can cause severe burns to the eyes, throat, and lungs. Ammonia is not suspected of causing death but continuous exposure to low levels can cause irritation of the respiratory system and difficulty with vision.

Methane is lighter than air, highly flammable, and explosive. It is odorless, colorless, and must be measured with a gas detector. Quickly rising methane can accumulate under roofs or at the top of enclosed rooms or buildings. An errant electric spark or lighted torch can cause an explosion.

Safety Issues and Manure Handling

Drowning

A liquid manure or wastewater storage presents the hazard of drowning. Some liquid manure storages will develop floating crusts that can become dry on the surface. An individual who ventures out on this crust thinking it is a hard surface can easily break through and drown.

All manure storages require child tight fences, covers, grates and warning signs. Operators of tractors that go through unprotected openings into liquid manure storages often become drowning victims.

Electric Hazardous

Electric motors powering manure handling equipment and portable power tools, lights, and cords are all potential sources of life threatening electric shock. The corrosive atmosphere around manure handling equipment and storages will quickly deteriorate improperly installed or maintained electric distribution systems. All electrical installations should be done according to applicable local and NEC Codes.

When working on electric powered machinery, be sure to use proper lock out and tag out procedures to prevent injury from machine startup while someone is exposed to moving parts or in the machine.

Machinery Entanglement and Entrapment

Manure handling machinery, such as pumps, conveyors, manure spreaders, and tractors all contain various moving parts that can inflict injury or death.

Rotating shafts, belts and pulleys, chains and sprockets, and intermeshing gears can all cause injuries. Possible injury points should have guards in place and appropriate warning labels in readable condition.

Mobile Accidents

Operating manure spreading trucks, tractors, and loaders requires proper care and attention to standard safe farm machinery operating procedures.

A particular hazard is pulling heavy manure spreaders with tractors that are too small and inadequate trailer brakes to allow safe stopping and downhill travel.

Because sand-laden dairy manure is about 25% denser than traditional liquid dairy manure, the same volume of sand laden manure in a spreader will place considerably more stress on frames and drawbars and requires better braking capacity.

Be alert to how easy it is to overturn a loader tractor in areas with slippery and uneven surfaces.

Everyone has an obligation to design, supply, buy, operate, and maintain manure storage and handling systems that are safe for workers and visitors. Work closely with your designer and manure system suppliers to assure a safe and effective manure handling system.

Take time today to evaluate your existing manure handling system for safety. Review with all workers, including family members, good safety procedures before they head out to scrape, pump, or spread manure.

The Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department has a series of fact sheets concerning safety. You may find them on our Web site, www.age.psu.edu, by calling 814 865 7685 or contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

Consider These Points When Selecting A Site

Proper siting needs to take into consideration all of the planning and operational issues associated with these facilities such as water quality, air quality and odor concerns, transportation, and accessibility to alternative manure markets.

These considerations need to be viewed in relation to the appropriateness of the individual farm site to accommodate the proposed operation, as well as the affect that the farm may have on the neighboring community.

The evaluation of available sites for a new or expanding animal production facility should be done in advance of the final purchase of the site. This evaluation can be done by the proposed owner or operator, or in cooperation with a professional consultant.

Local zoning requirements

The authority for determining the siting of particular land uses in Pennsylvania, including the siting of animal production facilities, lies with local government. This authority resides at the local level where residents can, through community planning efforts, determine appropriate locations for the various land uses which need to be accommodated in the area.

(Turn to Page 39)

Operators proposing to build facilities should check with the local municipality to determine if they have zoning or other land use ordinances that direct where animal production facilities may or may not be sited.

Local zoning requirements are developed recognizing that they need to provide designated areas to accommodate all types of land uses, including agriculture. These zoning requirements often designate appropriate areas for agricultural operations, such as large animal production facilities, to assure that they can integrate well into the existing and planned community.

Proper, well-conceived zoning ordinances can be an excellent means to minimize conflicts between agricultural producers and other land uses. Township officials and their staff can contact their state association for assistance in developing practical and effective zoning ordinances for agricultural operations.

When selecting an appropriate site for a new animal production facility, the operator should consider two broad categories of concerns. First is the appropriateness of the site itself in relation to the construction and operation of the facility. Second, is the potential affect that the proposed operation could have on the neighboring community and the region.

Not only does the operator need to determine if the characteristics of the site will accommodate the facility, but the operator

Nutrient Management Plans Lower Fertilizer Cost And Prevent Water Pollution

Marty Heatherington writes and approves nutrient management plans as part of her responsibilities as Chesapeake Bay Technician for the Schuylkill Conservation District. Currently Heatherington works with 40 farmers who have Chesapeake Bay contracts and are required to have nutrient management plans implemented on their farms.

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — Writing nutrient management plans allows Marty Heatherington to help farmers keep clean water clean. As the Chesapeake Bay Coordinator for the Schuylkill Conservation District, it's Heatherington's job to help farmers develop best management practices on their farms.

"I provide nutrient management information and help them with the technical and administration work," said Heatherington. "We work with the farmers to determine what Best Management Practices (BMPs) he wants to install on his farm."

Nutrient Management Plans A Must

In order to receive funding through the Chesapeake Bay program, farmers are required to have nutrient management plan. Heatherington is certified to write and approve these plans. However, the larger operations, defined as CAFOs, must hire private consultants to write their plans.

"I will write plans for any farmer who is in the Bay program," said Heatherington. "And I encourage other farmers to work with private consultants."

According to Heatherington, most farmers start out being apprehensive about working with the government. But when they see the benefits that their neighbor is getting out the program, they're more willing to get involved with the Chesapeake Bay program.

"The word of mouth is probably my best seller for new clients," said Heatherington. "Once they see their neighbor putting up a new manure storage facility, they'll call me about the program."

Manure Storage Hot Ticket Item

When Heatherington first meets with the farmer to develop a nutrient management plan and enroll them in the Chesapeake Bay program, she works with them to determine what will work best on their operation.

"Manure storage systems are the big ticket item that we install," said Heatherington. "But we also install diversions around barns, roof gutters, and other nutrient management tools."

As part of the Chesapeake Bay program, Heatherington helps the farmers develop Ag Waste Storage Plans on their farm. Part of that plan includes conservation plans for croplands and a nutrient management plan for the animal operation.

Nutrient Management Benefits The Farmer

"My best salespeople are the other farmers," said Heatherington. "For farmers it is all about the economics."

When Heatherington develops a plan for a farmer, she shows him how much money he can save by using less fertilizer and managing his on-farm nutrients better. For most farmers, manure is considered a waste product. But most plans that Heatherington writes include savings in the side dressing.

"When I add up my calculations, I go back to the farmer and show him that he doesn't need as much side dressing," said Heatherington.

Usually the farmers don't believe Heatherington. So she challenges them to use two different fields and put normal amounts of fertilizer on one field and cut back on the other field.

"When we do a yield check, there is no difference in the yields," said Heatherington. "I don't expect them to take my word for it. I get them to see it for themselves."

NMP Needs More Funding

Heatherington is fortunate in her county to have so many farmers interested in developing nutrient management plans. Unfortunately, only half of the farmers are located in the Chesapeake Bay watershed. The other farmers do not have funding available to develop their plans.

"And money is getting tighter in the Chesapeake Bay program," said Heatherington. "We're competing with more and more counties, and the program seems to be losing money."

Currently Heatherington has 40 farms contracted with the Chesapeake Bay program. However, she would like to offer the farmers outside the Bay watershed the same opportunities.

"We're hoping to get funding through the Growing Greener fund," said Heatherington. "Schuylkill has submitted the highest number of proposals for Growing Greener projects in Pennsylvania. However, none of the ag projects received any monies."

Nutrient Management Plan And Other Environmental Issues

Bill Rodgers

Brubakers Consulting Service

In the past, Nutrient/Manure Management Plans developed by commercial specialists, local soil conservation district staff, and county extension agents either met a program requirement or improved the nutrient usage on a farm.

Effective October 1, 1997, Pennsylvania required approved Nutrient Management Plans for all Concentrated Animal Operations (CAO) with greater than 2,000 pounds of livestock liveweight per acre of land available for manure production.

Most of these plans are in the implementation stage and must be reviewed once every three years. These plans should be amended if there are significant changes:

- ✓ A net increase of 10% in the animal equivalent units per acre.
- ✓ A decrease of 20% in the amount of nitrogen that can be used on the operation.
- ✓ A change in the use of excess manure utilization.
- ✓ The operation can not achieve at least 80% of the listed yield goal.
- ✓ When a different Best Management Practice (BMP) is planned than listed in the original plan.

The specialist who developed your plan can complete a plan amendment and have it approved by the County Conservation District.

Accurate record keeping can greatly assist the specialist who is completing the three-year review of your nutrient management plan. Each approved nutrient management plan is required to maintain the following records:

- ✓ Manure applications (date, field, manure type, and application rate)
 - ✓ Other fertilizer application records
 - ✓ Crop yields
 - ✓ Soil tests
 - ✓ Manure analysis
 - ✓ Manure production records
- Operations that export manure also need to maintain:
- ✓ The manure export/transport sheets provided by the County Conservation District.
 - ✓ Name, address, and amount of manure that was sold, given, or used by other operators off the farm that produced the manure.
 - ✓ Amount of manure used for other purposes other than land application.

Operations, not considered concentrated animal operations, have developed nutrient management plans and must maintain the same records. Why develop a nutrient management plan when not required?

Nutrient Management Plan

To become eligible for the low interest/cost share programs that are available for the implementations of Best Management Practices. If you plan to add a new manure storage facility, waterways, terraces, barnyard management practices, etc. and include these in the nutrient management plan, you can be eligible for either cost-share money or receive a low interest loan financing the implementation of the BMP.

To improve the nutrient efficiency on your farm. Manure and soil sampling, as well as manure application equipment calibration, are part of the planning and implementation of a nutrient management plan. By completing these items, you can improve your manure use and reduce your need for additional fertilizers.

Many animal operations still do not account for the nutrients they receive from manure that is applied on their farm. Without collecting a manure analysis or completing a calibration of your spreading equipment, the amount of N-P-K that is applied with your manure is not known. Knowing your N-P-K can easily improve profitability.

Within the last year it is required that animal operations with greater than 1000 AEUs develop a Confined Animal Feeding Operation NPDES Permit, issued by the Pennsylvania Department of Environment. This permit is dependent on the number of animals only, unlike the nutrient management regulations that are set on number of animals per acre.

If you are a CAO and have greater than 300 animal equivalent units, you need to develop a CAFO permit. Complete information on these permits is available from the regional DEP offices, the County Conservation District Office or from your nutrient management specialist.

Another nutrient management issue is the nitrogen -v- phosphorus based plans. Pennsylvania's nutrient management plans are currently based on the nitrogen needs of the planned crop. Other states require nutrient management plans be based on the most limiting factor - either nitrogen or phosphorus.

These states have developed an indexing system to determine those sites that have a high potential for phosphorus loss to surrounding surface water bodies. One aspect of these evaluations is how much soil is lost from a field in a given year due to erosion. This is the most time-consuming element of these systems to determine.

Pennsylvania does have current regulations requiring all farms that till ground to have a Conservation Plan developed and implemented for their farming operation. At no cost to the operator, your local NRCS office will develop these plans.

Manada Construction Co. specializes in the agricultural field, excavating for N.R.C.S. projects, site grading for all types of animal housing and manure storage facilities.

Ten years ago as confinement and dairy operations became larger we recognized a need for a more economical way to store manure. Working within the guidelines of the N.R.C.S. we developed the H.D.P.E. Liner System. This plastic material is durable, U.V. resistant, long-lasting and cost efficient. Each system has a built in drainage and leak detection system to insure the liners integrity. Concrete agitation ramps are incorporated for dairy operations.

We have installed over 100 installations in Pa. and surrounding states.

Our family business would like to take this opportunity to thank all the farm families we have had the pleasure to serve over the last 30 years and are looking forward to serving the agricultural community in the future.

must also evaluate if the facility will fit appropriately into the area, based on local zoning, neighboring land uses and other community wide concerns.

Some of the key issues that need to be considered when determining the appropriateness of a particular site for agricultural development are described below.

It should be noted that these issues may also be addressed through Best Management Practices (BMPs), as are described throughout the remaining chapters of this manual, and therefore may not be an issue when it comes to siting. For example, if the manure from the facility will be processed immediately in a way that will eliminate odors, this practice may negate some of the siting concerns related to manure odors.

Distances from residences, businesses, churches, schools and recreational areas

Determine where the facility might be built on the proposed site and estimate how far the facility will be from neighbors. The land use of the neighboring properties should also be considered when evaluating a site for agricultural development. This can be done using topographic maps of the area which may be available for review at the local county conservation district office.

Larger animal production facilities should be located away from nonagricultural land uses where possible.

Check the zoning requirements of the local municipality. Strong agricultural zoning can help assure that the facility will not be a conflicting land use with current or future neighbors. Local zoning is a highly effective practice to address these concerns.

(Turn to Page 47)

Local municipalities should contact their state association for direction in developing appropriate local restrictions.

Prevailing wind

Determine the prevailing wind direction to help in identifying which, if any, neighboring areas are likely to be affected by the production facility.

The most critical wind direction is that observed during warm weather when neighbors have windows open in their homes, hang laundry outside, and participate in outdoor activities. Most landowners will know the prevailing wind direction during the summer months. Generally, these winds will be northwesterly or southwesterly.

Note that the location of the animal housing facility and manure storage, as well as the direction of exhaust fans/vents, must be carefully considered. These parts of the facility may produce odor and other gaseous emissions continuously, so their location is more important than the location of fields that will occasionally receive manure.

For operations that propose to apply manure throughout the summer months, the selection of application fields as well as manure handling and application techniques are also critical factors in assessing the impact from the operation.

Topography

Odor plumes traveling across flat terrain will undergo less turbulence and dilution compared to that of hilly countryside. The topography ("lay of the land") also determines the path of odors during thermal inversion (see below).

Path of odors during thermal inversion

During cool, still nights air temperatures often are "upside down", or inverted, from what is normally observed during the day. Cooler air is near the ground, while warmer air is found at higher altitudes. This is called "thermal inversion." Under these conditions, odors also stay near the ground and can travel greater distances from the facility with only minimal dilution.

Examine the site and determine where any possible exhaust air would go as it leaves the facility. In times of thermal inversion, it would stay close to the ground and flow downhill. Carefully consider the distance to the nearest neighbors in this path.

Obstructions in the path of exhausted air

Shrubs, bushes, and trees near exhaust fans provide limited odor dissipation. Groves of trees near fans provide moderate odor reduction. Wooded areas (through which other buildings can't be seen) offer increased odor reduction. Vegetative buffers that include conifers help insure continuous foliage and odor suppression throughout the year.

Visibility of the operation

Screening animal production facilities with vegetative buffers or through the use of site topography can help increase the acceptance of the facility by the community.

SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. INTRODUCES "THE MANURE SYSTEM OF THE FUTURE"

Problems with manure handling are not new to the farm industry; however, with the larger operations that exist today, the challenge of handling tremendous volumes is.

Add to this the pressure from non-agricultural communities, the government, and environmental authorities, and you, the farmer, find yourself with a challenge that is only going to get bigger in the future.

There are answers to your manure handling problems, namely: ODOR, RUNOFF, STORAGE, NUTRIENT BUILD-UP, SOLIDS BUILD-UP, AND SOIL COMPACTION. The answer is the NC Nutrient Control System, THE MANURE SYSTEM OF THE FUTURE.

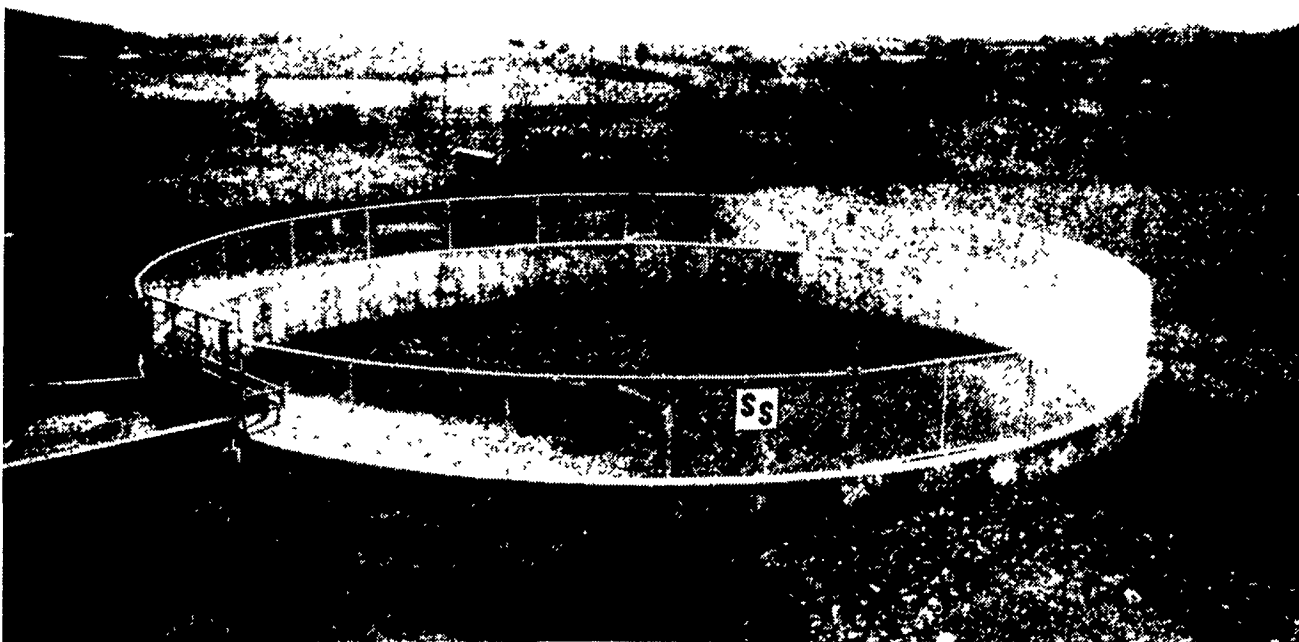

The NC Nutrient Control System is a proven successful four-part approach to manure management. All phases of the nutrient cycle are addressed and mastered by means of a mechanical solids separator, an aerator, a pulse-jet for liquids, and composting for solids.

To understand this entire turnkey system, one needs a good understanding of each phase. But realize that even though this four-part system covers all phases of nutrient control, it is possible to successfully implement only a portion of the system; the appropriate system for you is determined by your operation's needs.

IF YOU ARE CONCERNED ABOUT NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT AND CONTROLLING COSTS OF MANURE HANDLING, CALL US... WE CAN HELP.

If you have existing manure storage structures and would like to incorporate one or more of these phases, please get in touch with us.

WE BUILD CONCRETE STORAGE TANKS... NRCS CONCURRED. POURED IN PLACE: ABOVE GROUND, PARTIAL BACKFILL. PRECAST CONCRETE: ABOVE GROUND, PARTIAL BACKFILL.

Sample Nutrient Plan For The Nutrient Management Act

The following plan was developed by the State Soil Commission to provide a sample of what a complete nutrient management plan, developed for the Nutrient Management Act (NMA), may look like. This sample plan does not encompass all of the planning concerns that may be encountered when developing plans under this program. This plan only provides an example of what may be found on the type of farm described in this plan.

The format used for this sample plan is just one of many possible formats and contains the required plan elements as outlined in the checklist developed for the NMA program. Planners are not required to follow the format of this sample plan but are expected to provide all the information indicated on the checklist. Planners should note that the easier the plan is to follow and check, the quicker and more accurate the plan review will be.

It is recommended that plans submitted for review and approval under the act must be accompanied by a table of contents indicating where the various required elements of the plan are. The checklist developed for the program has been used as the table of contents for this sample plan. The use of the checklist as a table of contents is a recommended practice to assure all elements have been completed and show where those elements are detailed in plan.

This sample plan provides information showing how the numbers in the plan were generated. On most pages, the descriptive information is outlined in call-out boxes. This information is generally not required in plans developed under the act, but it helps to show the plan reviewer how the various information documented in the plan derived.

Plan reviewers will be checking figures in the plans to assure that they were calculated correctly. In order to assure the timely and accurate review of the plans submitted to the district, the planner is strongly encouraged to submit this type of information with the plan or a computer printout recognized by the NMA program. The inclusion of this information in the plan reduces or may eliminate the need for the review staff to contact the plan developer to determine how the information was derived.

Operator Information:

Box 222
Centerville, PA 12435-6789
(Located 3 miles north of Farmville, PA)

County: Centre County

Farm Description:

The Example farm is a mixed dairy/poultry operation. All poultry manure is collected from within the high rise layer house and exported from the operation. The dairy freestall operation consists of a herd of 100 Holstein cows. There are no replacement animals on this operation; they are purchased as needed. Calves are all sold at 3 days of age. A 62' diameter, 14-foot deep, liquid manure storage facility provides 296,000 gallons of usable capacity adequate for 6 months of storage of the liquid dairy manure, washwater, and direct rainfall. The entire operation is 163 acres, with 154 of those acres routinely receiving manure application. The balance of the farm acreage is devoted to a sacrifice lot (1 acre), farmstead, and production facilities (8 acres). The operator has the dairy animals confined 85% of the day during the winter period and 70% of the day during summer months. When the animals are out of the barn, the operator estimates that they are on the sacrifice lot 40% of the time. The crop rotation for this operation is one year corn silage, followed by three years corn grain, followed by four years alfalfa hay.

Calculation of the total amount of manure able to be stored in storage 14' total depth - 0.5' freeboard - 0.4' (for 25 yr Stormwater) = 13.1' usable depth Square feet of storage surface = $3.14 \times (62 \text{ (diameter)} / 2 \text{ (to get radius)})^2 = 3,018 \text{ sq. feet. Usable volume} = (13.1' \times 3,018 \text{ ft}^2) \times 7.48 \text{ gal per ft}^3 = 296,000 \text{ gal (rounded from 295,728 gallon.)}$

Receiving Stream: Little Fishing Creek

Special Protection Waters:

Those areas of Little Fishing Creek that flow through the farm are designated as a High Quality (HQ) - Cold Water Fishery (CWF).

A list of special protection waters is available from the conservation district office, the DEP, or the State Conservation Commission

Total Acres of Operation: 163 total acres

Total Acres Where Nutrients Are Applied:

Owned: 154 Acres
Rented: 0 Acres

Calculation of annualized AEU: 100 (cows) X 1,300 lbs (per cow) X 365 (days/yr) / 1,000 = 130 AEU's, cows 150,000 (layers) X 3.5 lbs. (per layer) X 365 (days on operation) / 365 (days/yr.) / 1,000 = 525 AEU's, layers 130 AEU's (cows) + 525 AEU's (layers) = 655 Total

What "Nutrient Management" Means to Lancaster County

Kevin R. Seibert

Nutrient Management Specialist

Lancaster County Conservation District

Today in the season of government regulations, Pennsylvania's Act 6 Nutrient Management law perks up many ears of livestock operators and the non-agricultural community as well.

The term "Nutrient Management" is not a new, radical idea but has been around for some time now. Here in Lancaster County, the first organized nutrient management program started with the Rural Clean Water Program in 1981. This project addressed many factors that we look at today when an Act 6 plan is written.

The premise of many concerns of the non-farm community and government officials is that there is so many more animals being raised today than during the good old days of our great grandparents. Thus more animals equals more manure.

We also hear about diminishing agriculture acres, being used up by development, and would assume that that there surely is a problem with using all the nutrients in the manure. This is where a column written by Jeff Stoltzfus comes into play.

Jeff has a copy of a 1904 Yearbook of Agriculture that contains many statistics that the modern PA Statistical Summary does. When you compare the figures between 1904 and 1998, we find out that PA now has 467,700 less dairy cows, 437,500 less horses and mules, and 813,000 less sheep. The numbers do show an increase of 120,000 hogs and 276,500 cattle & calves (this excludes dairy cows).

Although acreage for crops have diminished by 3,304,000 acres or 44%, actual total crop production increased by 46%. In 1904, Pennsylvania farmers raised 30% more animals and grew 46% less crops.

Statistically, Pennsylvania as a whole has less of a problem with manure nutrients today than we did 96 years ago. (Source (1904 Yearbook of Agriculture)(1998-99 PA Statistical Summary, USDA, PDA)("Just Like the Good Old Days" Jeff Stoltzfus, 10/1997 Livestock Reporter).

Through selective breeding and improved management and techniques, the agriculture community has increased yields of crops thus needing less land to produce more crops and less livestock to produce more food and fiber.

Fewer American farmers are now producing more food on less land for more people than ever before in history. The American public spends a smaller percentage of their income on food to feed their family than any other country in the world.

(Turn to Page 62)

UTILIZE THOSE NUTRIENTS

in late summer-early fall, followed by MEGA-GREEN or CENTURY BMR Sorghum Sudangrass in Late Spring early Summer.

GREEN SPIRIT RYEGRASS can utilize more Nitrogen and Phosphorus than regular rye, and outyield it as well! Green Spirit has the potential to yield as much as 8000 pounds of high quality forage per acre from Sept. to June. (on a dry matter basis.) Forage quality is equal to or better than top quality alfalfa. We've had more than 1 farmer say, "If I had enough Green Spirit I wouldn't need alfalfa!"

MegaGreen or Century BMR Sorghum Sudan has the potential to utilize more N than corn in a short time frame (June to Sept.) and also provide tons of high quality feed (20% protein) Can usually be grown without herbicides.

If you would prefer a sod forming perennial grass for lagoon or wastewater irrigation contact us about Matua or Luprime Prairiegrass, or Reeds Canarygrass.

What does "Nutrient Management" mean to Lancaster County? Nutrient management encompasses all sources of nutrients, not just manure. We also need to consider commercial fertilizers not just used on agricultural operations, but also on our lawns, golf courses and ice covered sidewalks. Lancaster County is crowded.

Being neighborly and hospitable seems to only go so far. As one of my Amish friends told me "Kevin, I'll take blame for some of the problem, but I won't take blame for all of the problem".

Through nutrient management, the agricultural community is learning that the soil only needs so much nutrients to grow a crop. The same community needs to recognize that extra nutrients not used by the crops and manure that runs to a stream or well does not go away, but affects many of their neighbors.

The non-agricultural community needs to understand that people need to eat, and that all farming operations including livestock operations put food on the table.

The same community needs to understand that the production cycle of food basically still includes growing crops, feeding livestock, and applying manure from the livestock back to the crops.

Although the profit margin may be the lowest of any business in the United States, agriculture can and must be carried out in a way that it will not affect the quality of water that from which many people use and depend while continuing to be an economically viable enterprise.

Nutrient Application Rates by Crop Group
Information taken from the Nutrient Application Section of the plan on page 9. This information can be shown by field or by crop group

*Alfalfa P and K requirements are supplied by the carryover P and K in the soil due to over application of these nutrients during the years corn is grown on this land
+ P₂O₅ and K₂O figures are not required to be shown in the plan but are strongly recommended to be shown, especially in this plan summary area, to assure that the farmer has a complete picture of the nutrient needs for the crops grown on the farm
- All numbers rounded off recognizing the built-in variation in figures used

-Manure application is restricted in the following areas:

- within 100 feet of farm well (field A-13) and the neighbor's well (field A-7), where surface flow is towards the well (unless the manure is incorporated within 24 hours of application, in which case manure application rates and supplemental fertilizer may need to be adjusted.)
- within 100 feet of Little Fishing Creek when the ground is frozen, snow covered, or saturated (fields A-2 and A-3)
- within the grassed waterway when the ground is frozen, snow covered, or saturated (fields A-1 and A-2)

Excess Manure Summary.
This information is a one line summary from the Excess Manure Utilization Section of the plan on page 11

Excess Manure Summary:

This operation exports approximately 260 tons of poultry manure in the spring to neighboring landowners for agricultural land use, and 1,600 tons of poultry manure in the fall to Organo-Grow for retail sale.

Summary of BMPs and the Implementation Schedule.
This information is taken from the Manure Management and Storm Water Runoff sections of the plan on pages 11 and 12. The in-field stormwater practices have been taken from the current conservation plan developed for this operation

Best Management Practices	Location of BMP	Implementation Date
Rotational Exercise Lot Renovation	Fields A10 and A15	Spring 1999
Grassed Waterways	Fields A1 and A2	Spring 1999
Diversion	Field A12	Spring 1999
Roof gutters	West side of barn	Spring 1999
Covercropping	Field A3	Fall 1997

Note: All manure management and stormwater practices listed above are consistent with the current conservation plan

Animal Numbers and Manure Generation:

In determining the amount of manure generated from each individual manure group in this operation, the farmer was asked to provide the following information for each group

- | | |
|---|--|
| a) Animal numbers on typical production day | e) % of time confined during this time frame. |
| b) Average animal weight for this type of animal | f) Bedding used per day |
| c) Dates that this manure group covers | g) Washwater per day added to this manure |
| d) Number of days these animals are not on the operation during this time frame | h) Storage dimensions to calculate rainfall added to manure. |

Manure Group #1: Dairy (spring application)

* Nutrient Content (lbs./100 gal.): $N=3.21$,

$P_2O_5=1.28$; $K_2O=2.57$ (from manure test)

Animal Number = 100 cows

Animal average weight = 1,300 lbs. Per cow

AEUs calculated = 130 AEUs

Dates for this manure type = Nov. 1 to April 30 (182 days)

Percent confinement (%time manure can be collected) = 85% Conf

Bedding used per day = negligible (cow mats used)

Washwater per day added to this manure = 350 gallons/day

Rainfall accumulated in storage = 17,872 gal. Rainfall added

Total manure produced (gal) = 288,000 gal. dairy manure for spring application.

AEUs calculation
100 cows X
1,300 lbs (per cow)
130 AEUs

All rainfall and evaporation data, by month, is available in the NMA tech. Manual, the PSU computer nutrient program, or on the internet through PSU homepage.

Calculation of rainwater accumulated in storage:

Net rainwater in storage 17" (total rainfall during pd) - 7.5" (evaporation) = 9.5" rainfall accumulated over period
Surface area of storage $3.14 \times (62'(\text{diameter})/2(\text{to get radius}))^2 = 3,018 \text{ sq feet}$
Gallons of rainwater for pd $3,018 \text{ ft}^2 \times (9.5"/12" \text{ per foot}) \times 7.48 \text{ gal per ft}^3 = 17,872 \text{ gallons}$

Total Manure Produced calculation

130 AEUs X 82 lbs Manure (per AEU per day) X 182 days X 85 / 2000 lbs per ton = 825 tons of raw manure.

825 tons X 250* gal per ton + (350 gal/day X 182 days) + 17,872 gal = 288,000 gal. (rounded off from 287,822)

*Note The program now recommends a conversion rate of 240 gal /ton instead of 250

Manure Group #2: Dairy (fall application)

* Nutrient Content (lbs /100 gal.): $N=3.36$,

$P_2O_5=1.62$; $K_2O=2.94$ (from manure test)

Animal number = 100 cows

Animal average weight = 1,300 lbs. per cow

AEUs calculated = 130 AEUs

Dates for this manure type = May 1 to Oct 31 (183 days)

Percent confinement (%time manure can be collected) = 70%

Bedding used per day = negligible (cow mats are used)

Washwater per day added to this manure = 350 gal. per day

Rainfall accumulated in the storage = 0 gal total added

Total manure produced (gal.) = 235,000 gal. dairy manure

Calculation of rainwater accumulated in storage:

Net rainwater in storage over period.

19.6" (total rainfall for period)

- 20.3" (evaporation)

0.0" rainfall accumulated

Total Manure Produced calculation

130 AEUs X 82 lbs Manure (per AEU per day) X 183 days X 70 / 2000 lbs per ton = 683 tons of raw manure.

683 tons X 250* gal per ton + (350 gal/day X 183 days) + 0 gal = 235,000 gal. (rounded off from 287,822)

*Note The program now recommends a conversion rate of 240 gal /ton instead of 250

Manure Group #3: Poultry (layers)

* Nutrient Content (lbs./100 gal.): N=34.5;

P₂O₅=52.8; K₂O=31.4 (from manure test)

Animal number = 150,000 layers

Animal average weight = 3.5 lbs. per layer

AEUs calculated = 525 AEUs

Dates for this manure type = Jan. 1 to Dec. 31 (365 days)

Total manure produced (tons) = 1,860 tons layer manure produced

Total manure produced calculation:

525 AEUs X 19.4 lbs. manure (per AEU per day) X 365 days / 2,000 lbs/ton = 1,860 tons of raw manure

1,860 tons + 0 tons (bedding) = 1,860 tons of raw manure

Manure Group #4: Dairy manure deposited on rotational grazing system

(This includes the manure deposited on the rotational exercise lots and the sacrifice lot, the manure from the sacrifice lot is collected twice a year and applied to land to be planted into corn silage)

* Nutrient Content (lbs./100 gal.): N=10; P₂O₅=4; K₂O=8 (book values)

Animal number = 100 cows

Animal average weight = 1,300 lbs per cow

AEUs calculated = 130 AEUs

Dates for this manure type = Nov.- April spring, and May - Oct. fall

Percent time in exercise lot = 15% spring and 30% fall

Total manure produced (tons) = 438 total tons deposited outside barn

Manure collected from sacrifice lot for fall application = 58 tons

Manure collected from sacrifice lot for spring applic. = 117 tons

Manure deposited on rotational exercise lot = 263 tons (29 tons/acre)

Total manure produced calculation:

Spring: 130 AEUs X 82 lbs. manure (per AEU per day) X 182 days X .15 / 2000 lbs./ton = 146 tons of manure

Fall: 130 AEUs X 82 lbs. manure (per AEU per day) X 183 days X .30 / 2000 lbs./ton = 293 tons of manure

Total: 146 tons spring + 292 tons fall = 438 tons of manure for this manure group

Calculation of manure collected from sacrifice lot for application to crop fields:

Spring: 146 tons (deposited in spring) X 0.4 (because 40% of time on lot) = 58 tons collected in spring

Fall: 293 tons (deposited in fall) X 0.4 (because 40% of time on lot) = 117 tons collected in fall.

Manure deposited on the 9-acre rotational exercise lot system:

438 tons (total deposited) - 58 tons (collected in spring) - 117 tons (collected in fall) = 263 tons deposited

Nutrient Sources Used On Operation:

Nutrient Source	Amount	Nutrient Contributions (lbs.)
		N	P ₂ O ₅ ⁺	K ₂ O ⁺
Liquid Dairy Manure (used on farm)	523,000 gal.	17,141 (total)	7,493	14,311
Solid Dairy Manure	438 tons	4,380 (total)	1,752	3,504
Residual from manure	(on 145 acres)	6,090	0	0

+ P₂O₅ and K₂O figures are not required to be shown in the plan, but are strongly recommended to be shown to assure that the farmer has a complete picture of the nutrient needs for the crops grown on the farm.

Liquid Dairy Manure (manure groups 1 and 2):

Manure N: (288,000 gal. (spring) / 100 X 3.21 lb. per 100 gal.) + (235,000 gal. (fall) / 100 X 3.36 lb. per 100 gal.) = 17,141 lbs. total N
 Manure P: (288,000 gal. (spring) / 100 X 1.28 lb. per 100 gal.) + (235,000 gal. (fall) / 100 X 1.62 lb. per 100 gal.) = 7,493 lbs. total P₂O₅
 Manure K: 288,000 gal. (spring) / 100 X 2.57 lb. per 100 gal.) + (235,000 gal. (fall) / 100 X 2.94 lb. per 100 gal.) = 14,311 lbs. total K₂O

Solid dairy Manure (manure group 4):

Manure N: 438 tons X 10 lb. per ton = 4,380 lbs. total N
 Manure P: 438 tons X 4 lb. per ton = 1,752 lbs. total P₂O₅
 Manure K: 438 tons X 8 lb. per ton = 3,504 lbs. total K₂O

Residual N from past manure applications (assumed that manure is applied at 6 out of 10 years)

Approximate annual manure nitrogen applied from past manure applications:

(9,000 gal. X 0.0321 X 3) + (9,000 gal. X 0.0336 X 2) + 6,000 gal. X 0.0336 X 1) / 6 = 279 lbs.

Residual N per acre based on this approximate average:

279 lbs. (total N) X .15 (residual factor for "frequent" manure history) = 42 lbs. residual N

Total residual N from this past manure history:

42 lbs. (residual manure N per acre) X 145 acres (receiving manure w/in rotation = 6,090 lbs.

Note manure analysis and manure amount figures were taken from the Nutrient Application Section of plan

Residual N from alfalfa fields converted to corn silage fields (residual from legumes):

(assumed that alfalfa fields converted to corn silage fields are less than 25% alfalfa at the time of conversion. Also, fields are considered to be composed of productivity group #1 soil)
 40 lbs. N (per acre converted) X 21 acres (converted) = 40 lbs. N from past legume crop

Total nutrients supplied by starter:

Starter N:

10 lbs. N (per acre) X 92 acres = 920 lbs. of N from starter

Starter P₂O₅:

20 lbs. P₂O₅ (per acre) X 92 acres = 1,840 lbs. of P₂O₅ from starter

Starter K₂O:

10 lbs. K₂O (per acre) X 92 acres = 920 lbs. of K₂O from starter

(Turn to Page 68)

Manure Application and Additional Fertilizer Needs by Crop Group

Calculating net nutrient needs :

the formula for this is (nutrient needs from soil test) - (nutrients in starter) - (residual N from manure) - (residual N from legume) = net need a sample of this calculation is as follows (for corn grain)

Net need for N

160 lbs N (total need) - 10 lbs N (starter) - 42 lbs N (residual manure) - 0 lbs N (residual legume) = 108 lbs N

Net need for P₂O₅

60 lbs P (total need) - 20 lbs P (starter) = 40 lbs. P₂O₅

Net need for K₂O

45 lbs K (total need) - 10 lbs K (starter) = 35 lbs. K₂O

Calculating nitrogen available from manure:

(the 0.35 and 0.20 Nitrogen incorporation factors are taken from the PA Agronomy Guide)

(the 0.35 figure is based on liquid manure spring applied and incorporated within 2 to 4 days)

3.21 lbs N per 100 gal (total N from manure test) X 0.35 (N availability factor) = 1.12 lbs N per 100 gal.

N avail. for solid fall manure

3.36 lbs N per 100 gal (total N from manure test) X 0.20 (N availability factor) = 0.67 lbs N per 100 gal.

N available from solid manure.

10 lbs N per ton (total N from book value) X 0.20 (N availability factor*) = 2 lbs N per ton

* note the 0.2 availability factor was used based on the practice that the manure sits out on the sacrifice lot, open to the weather, for 6 months before it is collected and applied, therefore volatile N has been lost for corn grain, spring applied liquid manure (manure group #1).

108 lbs N/acre - 1.12 lbs N per 100 gal. (of manure) X 100 (to convert from 100s of gallons) = 9,642 gallons of manure

for corn grain, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2).

108 lbs N/acre - 0.67 lbs N per 100 gal (of manure) X 100 (to convert from 100s of gallons) = 16,119 gallons of manure for corn silage, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2).

95 lbs N/acre - 0.67 lbs N per 100 gal (of manure) X 100 (to convert from 100s of gallons) = 14,179 gallons of manure for corn silage, spring applied solid manure (manure group #4).

95 lbs N/acre - 2 lbs N per ton (of manure) = 47 tons of manure for corn silage, fall applied solid manure (manure group #4).

Determining the Planned Manure Rate:

(is any rate equal to or less than the balanced rate based on manure spreader calibration),

Liquid manure

In this example we used 9,000 gallons of liquid manure because we wanted to put manure on all of our corn grain fields and we wanted to stay within the 3,000 gallon increment of the spreader

This determination was calculated as follows

523,000 gallons (of manure) - 50 acres (corn grain) = 10,460 gallons per acre (9,000 gal. to stay within spreader rate)

For the corn silage fields the balanced rate indicates that the planned rate could be 3,000, 6,000, 9,000, or 12,000 gallons per acre, the 6,000 gallons per acre rate was selected to maximize the number of acres that would get the manure and to stay within the spreader increments

Solid manure

For the solid manure, the calibrated rate for the equipment used, based on the preferred running gear, was 20 tons per acre, therefore we could apply 20 or 40 tons per acre based on this calibrated rate and the balanced rate, but in order to maximize the land that will be get manure, the 20 tons rate was selected

Calculation of nutrients supplied by manure

for corn grain, spring applied liquid manure (manure group #1)

N supplied = 9,000 gallons - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 1.12 lbs N per 100 gal = 101 lbs N

P₂O₅ supplied = 9,000 gal - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 1.28 lbs P₂O₅ per 100 gal = 115 lbs P₂O₅

K₂O supplied = 9,000 gal - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 2.57 lbs K₂O per 100 gal = 231 lbs K₂O

for corn grain, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2)

N supplied = 9,000 gallons - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 0.67 lbs N per 100 gal = 60 lbs N

P₂O₅ supplied = 9,000 gal - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 1.63 lbs P₂O₅ per 100 gal = 146 lbs P₂O₅

K₂O supplied = 9,000 gal - 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 2.94 lbs K₂O per 100 gal = 265 lbs K₂O

Notes. - Manure spreader calibration data: increments of 3,000 gal. per acre for liquid, solid spreader calibrated at 20 tons per acre

- Nutrient content of the manure groups are listed on pages 6 - 8 of the plan

- Negative numbers in the nutrient balance columns indicate an excess of these nutrients

- All corn silage is preceded by a less than 25% alfalfa stand the previous year

- See page 10 for restricted areas for manure application

- + The plan is not required to include P and K values but it is strongly recommended to assure the farmer has all needed nutrient information for the farm

- * This nutrient need will be supplied by the excess P and K supplied during the manure application years on this cropland

-  This availability factor was used because the manure sits out on the exercise lot for more than 7 days

for corn silage, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2):

N supplied = 6,000 gallons + 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 0.67 lbsN per 100 gal = 40 lbs N

P2O5 supplied = 6,000 gal. + 100 (to change to 100s of gal) X 1.63 lbs P2O5 per 100 gal = 97 lbs. P2O5

K2O supplied = 6,000 gal. + 100 (to change to 100s of gal.) X 2.94 lbs K2O per 100 gal = 176 lbs. K2O

for corn silage, spring applied solid manure (manure group #4):

N supplied = 20 tons X 2 lbs. N per ton = 40 lbs N

P2O5 supplied = 20 tons X 4 lbs. N per ton = 80 lbs. P2O5

K2O supplied = 20 tons X 8 lbs. N per ton = 160 lbs. K2O

for corn silage, fall applied solid manure (manure group #4):

N supplied = 20 tons X 2 lbs. N per ton = 40 lbs N

P2O5 supplied = 20 tons X 4 lbs N per ton = 80 lbs. P2O5

K2O supplied = 20 tons X 8 lbs N per ton = 160 lbs. K2O

Nutrient balance calculation:

for corn grain, spring applied liquid manure (manure group #1):

108 lbs N (net nutrient need) - 101 lbs. N (from manure) = 7 lbs. of N needed per acre

40 lbs P2O5 (net nutrient need) - 115 lbs. P2O5 (from manure) = -75 lbs. of P2O5 needed per acre (75 lbs. excess P)

35 lbs K2O (net nutrient need) - 231 lbs. K2O (from manure) = -196 lbs. of K2O needed per acre (196 lbs excess K) for corn grain, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2):

108 lbs N (net nutrient need) - 60 lbs. N (from manure) = 48 lbs. of N needed per acre

40 lbs P2O5 (net nutrient need) - 146 lbs P2O5 (from manure) = -106 lbs. of P2O5 needed per acre (106 lbs. excess P)

35 lbs K2O (net nutrient need) - 265 lbs. K2O (from manure) = -230 lbs. of K2O needed per acre (230 lbs excess K)

for corn silage, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #2):

95 lbs N (net nutrient need) - 40 lbs N (from manure) = 55 lbs. of N needed per acre

43 lbs P2O5 (net nutrient need) - 97 lbs P2O5 (from manure) = -54 lbs. of P2O5 needed per acre (54 lbs excess P)

179 lbs K2O (net nutrient need) - 176 lbs K2O (from manure) = 3 lbs. of K2O needed per acre

for corn silage, spring applied solid manure (manure group #4):

95 lbs N (net nutrient need) - 40 lbs N (from manure) = 55 lbs. of N needed per acre

43 lbs P2O5 (net nutrient need) - 80 lbs P2O5 (from manure) = -37 lbs. of P2O5 needed per acre (37 lbs excess P)

179 lbs K2O (net nutrient need) - 160 lbs K2O (from manure) = 19 lbs. of K2O needed per acre

for corn silage, fall applied liquid manure (manure group #4):

95 lbs N (net nutrient need) - 40 lbs N (from manure) = 55 lbs. of N needed per acre

43 lbs P2O5 (net nutrient need) - 80 lbs P2O5 (from manure) = -37 lbs of P2O5 needed per acre (37 lbs excess P)

179 lbs K2O (net nutrient need) - 160 lbs K2O (from manure) = 19 lbs. of K2O needed per acre

- + P₂O₅ and K₂O figures are not required to be shown in the plan but are strongly recommended to be shown in the plan to assure that the farmer has a complete picture of the nutrient needs for the crops grown on the farm

Manure application restricted areas:

- within 100 feet of the farm well (field A-13) and the neighbor's well (field A-7), where surface flow is towards the well (unless the manure is incorporated within 24 hours of application, in which case manure application rates and supplemental fertilizer rates may need to be adjusted)
- within 100 feet of Little Fishing Creek when the ground is frozen, snow covered, or saturated (fields A-2 and A-3)
- within the grassed waterway when the ground is frozen, snow covered, or saturated (fields A-1, and A-2)

Special protection waters

Operators of proposed facilities should contact their regional DEP office to determine if the site is in an existing or proposed special protection watershed.

CAFOs located in special protection watersheds must obtain individual NPDES permits. Operators should carefully consider development of new operations in these watersheds due to the increased regulatory requirements that may apply to operations located in these areas.

Water resources

The site should have water resources adequate to accommodate the operation.

The operation must also be designed, constructed and operated to protect existing water resources.

Water resource issues to consider when investigating a particular site for siting an animal production facility include:

- water availability
- depth to water table
- distance of operation facilities from streams and other water bodies
- topography and hydrology
- existence of wetlands
- watershed characteristics/classification

Soils suitability

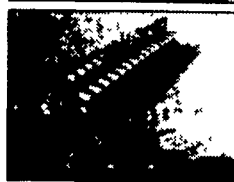

The soils at the proposed site should be adequate to produce the crops planned for the operation, to accept the portion of the manure planned to be applied at the site, and to accommodate the construction of the proposed buildings and manure storage. The county conservation district can assist the operator in determining the capabilities of the soils on the proposed site.

Local and regional transportation infrastructure

The availability and quality of the existing roads which can service the site will influence the cost of the facility as well as the ease of access to the site. Well-maintained roads are important for transportation of feed, animals and manure.

Operators of proposed facilities should meet with local representatives to determine the characteristics of the roads servicing the area. Access to utilities, especially electricity, must also be considered.

Identify if there are businesses in the area from which to purchase items and services to minimize travel time and to provide support for the local community.

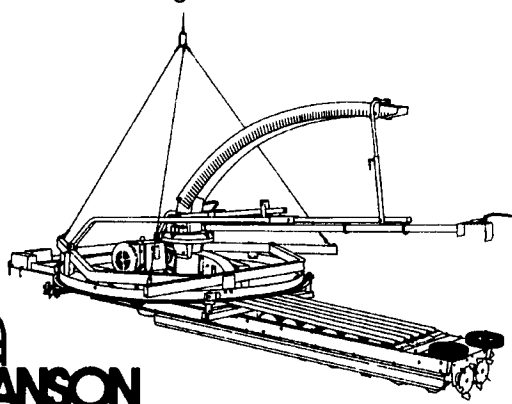

Areas for application of manure

Many CAOs and other larger operations will export manure to other farmers, which is a beneficial arrangement for both parties.

For those operators proposing to export manure to other farmers, the area selected for developing a facility should have adequate farm land nearby that is able to receive manure.

Land application of manure must either follow the practices in the Pennsylvania Manure Management Manual or approval or a permit must be obtained from DEP.

The operator should talk to the area farmers during the site selection phase to determine their interest in accepting the manure from the new facility. Operators needing to export manure, located in areas without adequate agricultural land nearby to export manure, will need to find an alternative use for the manure.

Alternative Manure Utilization Section

A) Manure exported to known landowners:

- 1) amount of manure to be exported annually: 260 tons
- 2) Name and location of importing operation: Cecil Miller Box 12, Route 66, Lamar, PA 16000
- 3) estimated number of acres available for application at importing site: 70 acres
- 4) estimated amount of manure that could be exported to this site: 260 tons
- 5) intended seasons and amounts for manure transfer:
Season: Spring Amount: 260 tons

B) Manure exported to known landowners other than ag land applications:

- 1) name and location of importer: Organo-Grow Route 44, Centerhall, PA 16000
- 2) brief description of the planned use of the manure: This facility composts and markets manure for lawn, garden, and other homeowner uses.
- 3) estimated amount to be transferred annually: 1,600 tons
- 4) intended season(s) and amount(s) for the transfers:
Season: spring Amount: 1,600 tons

Manure Management Section

The existing 5-acre exercise lot will be expanded to a 10-acre rotational lot system. This will consist of a 1-acre sacrifice lot adjacent to the barn, with the remaining 9 acres used for 3 rotational exercise paddocks of three acres each, for uses during times when soil conditions are adequate to handle animal traffic. The seep area next to the barn will be intercepted underground by a tile drain and piped into an existing tile drain, which has an adequate outlet into the stream.

The sacrifice lot will be improved per the PA Tech. Guide heavy use area protection standard using compacted stone and will be fenced. The manure from the sacrifice lot will be collected two times a year and applied to corn silage ground. The sacrifice lot will be used for the temporary stacking of manure in case of an emergency situation. The 3 rotational lots will be fenced and seeded, permanently to Kentucky 31 tall fescue. These rotational lots will be maintained to assure proper vegetative growth in order to hold soil and nutrients from leaving the area.

A diversion will exclude up-slope water from entering and flowing across the 10-acre rotational exercise lot system. This diversion will safely discharge diverted runoff into field A-13.

Roof gutters will be installed on the west side of the barn to exclude this clean water from the sacrifice lot. These gutters will directly discharge, by way of downspouts and an underground outlet, into the tile drainage system installed to address the seep area.

All manure management practices listed above are consistent with the current conservation plan.

Storm Water Runoff Control Section

The following critical runoff problem areas were identified on the operation and the BMPs to address these areas are listed with each of the problem areas:

- 1) A non-vegetated drainage way extends from field A1 and through field A2 and ending at the stream.
BMP required: grassed waterway to be installed by the spring of 1999.
- 2) Corn silage is removed from field A3 (having an average slope of 7%) resulting in excessive sheet flow entering into the stream. Manure is applied to this field outside of the growing season (late fall application after the crop has been harvested.)
BMP required: cover cropping to begin in the fall of 1997.

All storm water runoff practices listed above are consistent with the current conservation plan.

BMPs Depend On Site, Other Factors

Current methods of raising livestock and poultry frequently concentrate animals inside buildings or in confined feedlots, rather than using more traditional pasture management and feeding practices. Modern technology allows for increased efficiency in animal production which is necessary for Pennsylvania's agricultural industry to stay competitive.

Trends clearly indicate that the number and acreage of Pennsylvania farms will continue to decline, while the number of animals per farm will continue to increase. As the animal production industry evolves to fewer farms with more animals on less acres, and as citizens continue to move to rural areas, the potential for conflicts with neighboring land uses increases.

These conflicts have required the livestock and poultry industries to carefully review farm siting and farm management practices in order to better coexist with their neighbors.

This manual has been developed to outline Best Management Practices (BMPs) which can assist livestock and poultry operations in their efforts to protect local and regional natural resources, and to allow them to successfully integrate into the neighboring community.

Some of the BMPs described are mandatory practices to meet regulatory requirements. A comprehensive listing of laws affecting livestock and poultry producers can be found in Appendix B. In addition to these required practices, the manual also describes a number of suggested BMPs to assist producers in their efforts to voluntarily address site specific concerns.

local level in Pennsylvania. The siting of an operation in a community is often a major local concern. This manual reviews the issues associated with the proper siting of animal production facilities.

Air quality and odor concerns are important considerations for proposed and existing animal production facilities which are discussed in the manual. Several voluntary practices, such as the proper siting of both farm and residential developments, buffer plantings, manure treatments, covers on manure storage facilities, and other practices can help address air quality and odor issues.

A significant portion of this manual is devoted to water quality issues associated with livestock and poultry production.

Pennsylvania has adopted water quality anti-degradation requirements to assure that all water resources are protected, especially in areas with high or exceptional water quality. A number of regulatory and voluntary water quality protection programs have been implemented in Pennsylvania to oversee and assist operators of agricultural facilities and to assure that anti-degradation water quality requirements are met.

Practices used by livestock and poultry producers to address water quality concerns include the proper design and construction of animal waste storage facilities, proper manure and fertilizer application rates and methods, refined animal feeding programs, manure treatments, streamside buffers, and others.

All of the practices identified in this manual are useful only if incorporated into the operation of the facility. This will happen only if the practices are economically feasible and fit into the operator's overall farm management plan.

Nutrient loss reduction is a net gain to the farmer's economic viability and long term sustainability. It is more economical for farmers to properly manage their resources, than it is for them to degrade the resources that they rely on for their productivity.

No "one-size-fits-all" practice will apply to every farming operation. Site specific considerations such as animal type, number and density, as well as site location, soil and land conditions, and operator management skills will determine which practices are applicable and feasible for a given site.
